FROM VARS.

(Not our Correspondent.)
There is a correspondent who in Vars doth dwell, her day of high prices at the Toronto Cattle Market this morning. The dealers are all persuaded that the heavy runs of the winter have resulted in a scarcity of cattle, and that they may look for high prices some time to come. At present the prices are so high as to be prohibitory for many classes of dealers, and so they have ceased operating on a large scale, many being contently to keep up a small trade for the purpose of satisfying their more important customers. These conditions are prevalent in all classes of cattle, even feeders and stockers being at prices which will leave no profit after being prepared for the market. The trade in sheep and lambs is demoralized this morning. The

FOR SALE BY KENNY BROS

What stories he may write no one can tell; But the news is much twisted which he sends in, Be it caused by tanglefoot, champagne or gin.

Quite in touch with his calling he's a very nice man, And renders assistance to all he can;

But when with the boys he spends leisure time His mind pictures stories which he transcribes very fine.

And so with each issue some new things appear,

About quiet young men with a dashing career,

Or a runaway engine and no harm done,

And all things imaginable under the sun.

With reverence step aside and stand away back;

Remember your calling—work is not very slack;

Let the boys have a good time while they are young,

You should be their example till your work is done
