Thomas a war Grocer For It

Superior to any other green tea sold.

THE SNARE

BY RAFAEL SABATINI.

The Master Tale-Teller, Author of "Bardelys the Magnificent." Another Stirring Story of Adventure and Love in a New Setting-The Peninsular War.

WHO'S WHO.

Lt. Richard Butler of the Irish dragons, on a foraging expedition during Wellington's campaign against the French in Portugal, hears of a rare wine possessed by some monks. Drunk, he starts out to get some of it. He mistakes a nunnery for the monastery he seeks. When admittance is refused, believing the place is a "hotbed of treason," he forces his way in. Shocked and sobered when he realizes his sacrilege, he turns to go, but strikes his head on a pillar and falls unconscious.

The Peninsular War.

WHO'S WHO.

Lt. Richard Butler of the Irish dragons, on a foraging expedition during dark eyes returned to meet her own.

"I shall see to it that he is in no danger. You may depend upon me, who ask but the happy chance to serve you. I have influence with the government is concerned your brother shall take no harm."

CHAPTER X.

SYLVIA'S ADVICE.

Lady O'Moy and Miss Armytage drove along together into Lisbon. As they sat side by side in the well-up-holstered carriage Miss .rmytage besaid, her voice trembling a little. "You have made me very happy, count."

The Peninsular War.

WHO'S WHO.

Lt. Richard Butler of the Irish dragons. We'll talk to-morrow, Una," he promised her, as he stretched himself luxuriously upon that hard couch. "But meanwhile, on your life, not a word to anyone. You understand?"

"Of course I understand, my poor Dck."

EHAPTER X.

SYLVIA'S ADVICE.

Lady O'Moy and Miss Armytage drove along together into Lisbon. As they sat side by side in the well-up-holstered carriage Miss .rmytage besaid, her voice trembling a little. "You have made me very happy, count."

The veril talk to-morrow, Una," he promised her, as he stretched himself luxuriously upon that hard couch. "But meanwhile, on your life, not a word to anyone. You understand?"

CHAPTER X.

SYLVIA'S ADVICE.

Lady O'Moy and Miss Armytage drove along together into Lisbon. As they sat side by side in the well-up-holstered carriage Miss .rmytage became aware that her companion was trembling.

scribes, he turns to go, but strikes his head on a pillar and falls unconscious.

Sergt. Flanagan, who with a few troops accompanied him, meanwhile is attacked by peasants enraged at what they supposed was a deliberate violation of the convent. Outnumbered ten to one, he manages to escape when the abbess appeals to the peasants.

Sir Robert Crauford, commander of the light division, hears Flanagan's report that Butler was left for dead. "It is just as well," he says, "for Lord Wellington would have had him shot."

Sir Terence O'Moy, adjutant-general of the Irish dragoons, learns that Butler, who is his young wife's prother, left the convent alive, but has not returned to his regiment.

Capt. Tremayne, O'Moy's secretary, reminds Sir Terence that Richard's death would break Lady O'Moy's sheart. Temoyne, O'Moy's secretary, reminds Sir Terence that Richard's death would break Lady O'Moy's sheart. Temoyne, O'Moy's secretary, reminds Sir Terence that Richard's death would break Lady O'Moy's sheart. Temoyne, O'Moy's secretary, reminds Sir Terence that Richard's death would break Lady O'Moy's sheart. Temoyne, O'Moy's secretary, reminds Sir Terence that Richard's death would break Lady O'Moy's sheart. Temoyne, O'Moy's secretary, reminds Sir Terence that Richard's death would break Lady O'Moy's sheart. Temoyne, O'Moy's secretary, reminds Sir Terence that Richard's death would break Lady O'Moy's sheart. Temoyne, O'Moy's secretary, reminds Sir Terence that Richard's death would break Lady O'Moy's secretary, reminds Sir Terence that Richard's death would break Lady O'Moy's secretary, reminds Sir Terence that Richard's death would break Lady O'Moy's secretary, reminds Sir Terence that Richard's death would break Lady O'Moy's secretary, reminds Sir Terence that Richard's death would break Lady O'Moy's secretary, reminds Sir Terence that Richard's death would break Lady O'Moy's secretary, reminds Sir Terence that Richard's death would break Lady O'Moy's secretary, reminds Sir Terence that Richard's death would be any trouble w draw from the country.

Miguel Forjas, Portuguese secrtary of state, warns O'Moy that Butler must be punished.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE COUNT'S PROMISE.

Lady O'Moy at the moment did not stand in such urgent need of Miss Armytage as Miss Armytage imagined. She had heard the appalling story of her brother's escapade, but she had been unable to perceive in what it was so terrible as it was reciared. The whole thing appeared to her to be rather silly, and she refused seriously to consider that it could have any grave consequences for Dick. While she was still discussing the matter in terms of comparative calm, came an orderly to summon O'Moy away, so that he left her in compary of Samoval.

The count, who was engaged on a certain deep intrigue, did not trake his leave just yet. He sauntered with Lady O'Moy on the terrace and there discovered her mind to be even more frivolous and unstable than his perspicuity had hitherto suspected. However, he did not intend that the matter of her brother should be entirely forgotten, or lightly treated. Deliberately at last he revived it.

Fingering his snowy stock, he bent upon her eyes of glowing adoration. Dear Lady O'Moy, 'his teno voice when a rustile in the tax a young manated, and that Samoval's offer might be calculated to obtain him information of Butler's wherealouts when they became known, so that he might surrender him to the government the house offer over the question of Butler's continued absence. The bortuguese officer over the question of Butler's continued absence. The mortuged and surfered and surfered and surfered and surfered was killed and Berkeley was broken and sent home, for the mind to might surrender him to the government that the ment of Butler's continued absence. The surfered and surfered and surfered and surfered was herkely was broken and sent home, then they calculated to obtain him information of Eucler's wherealouts with the late and the surfered with him in the fright of the surfered was sufficient for the surfered with him in the score against poor Richard the mind to be calculated to obtain him information of the under them there was hearly and was the fri

The count, who was engaged on a certain deep intrigue, did not take his leave just yet. He sauntered with Lady O'Moy on the terrace and there discovered her mind to be even more frivolous and unstable than his perspicuity had hitherto suspected. However, he did not intend that the matter of her brother should be entirely forgotten, or lightly treated. Deliberately at last he revived it.

Fingering his snowy stock, he bent upon her eyes of glowing adoration. "Dear Lady O'Moy," his tenor voice was soft and soothing as a caress, "I

"Dear Lady O'Moy," his tenor voice was soft and soothing as a caress, "I sigh to think that one so adorable, so entirely made for life's sunshine and gradness, should have cause for a moment's uneasiness at the thought of the peril of your brother."

"Dick is not in peril," she answered.
"He is foolish to remain so long in the peril of the peril of your brother."

"Entirely pron a stick disclosed itsen, and this figure spoke her name sharply, warningly almost.
"Una! Una! Don't move!"

The voice was certainly the voice of Mr. Butler. But how came that voice into the body of this creature?

"Richard!" The name broke from her in a scream.

He is foolish to remain so long in ng, and of course he will have to unpleasantness whether is found. to say that he is in peril is . . .

SAWE

discovered.

CHAPTER IX. THE FUGITIVE.

parted and a imping figure that leaned heavily upon a stick disclosed itself, and this figure spoke her name sharply, warningly almost.

"Una! Una! Don't move!"

her in a scream.

"Sh!" He waved his hands in wild alarm to repress her. "For God's sake, be quiet! It's a ruined man I am if they find me here. Is there anywhere squari-you can hide me? Can you get am almost starving, a ing shot one fine morning before ing shot one fine morning before long."

"Why do you talk of being shot? You have done nothing to deserve that. Why should you fear it?"

Mr. Butler, in common with others, was actuated by the desire to spare his sister unnecessary pain or anxiety.

"It's not myself will take any risks," he said. "We are at war, and when men are at war killing becomes a sort of habit, and one life more or less is neither here nor there." And upon that he renewed his plea that she should hide him if she could and that on no account should she tell a single on no account should she tell a single soul—and Sir Terence least of any—of his presence.

"Go back to the bushes there," she bade him, "and wait until I come for you. I will make sure that the coast is clear."

Contiguous to her dressing-room, which overlooked the quadrangle, there was a small alcove which had been converted into a storeroom. A been converted into a storeroom. A door opening directly from her dressing-room communicated with this alcove, and of that door she was in possession of the key.

No one saw Lady O'Moy and the limping fugitive slip into the house. They gained the dressing-room and thence the alcove in complete safety. There, after Una had washed his wound and brought him food, Richard, allowing his exhaustion at last to conquer him, sank heavily down upon one Lady O'Moy and Miss Armytage drove along together into Lisbon. As they sat side by side in the well-up-holstered carriage Miss .rmytage became aware that her companion was trembling.

"Una, dear, whatever is the matter?"

"I—I have been so troubled about Richard," Lady O'Moy faltered. "It is preying upon my mind. I have been imagining that if Dick is hiding, a fugitive, he might naturally come to me for help."

"Time enough to consider it when it hences."

happens, Una. After all—"
"I know," her ladyship interrupted,
"But I think I should be easier in my mind if I knew what to do, to whom to mind if I knew what to do, to whom to appeal for assistance, for I am afraid that I should be very helpless myself. There is Terence, of course."

"No," said Sylvia gravely, "I shouldn't go to Terence."

"There is Count Samoval. He promised that if ever any such thing happened he would help me."

"I should go to Sir Terence before I went to Count Samoval. By which I mean that I should not go to Count Samoval at all under any circum-Samoval at all under any circumstances. I do not trust him. Count Samoval is the intimate friend of the Marquis of Minas, who remains a member of the government, and who next to the Principal Souza was, and no doubt is, the most bitter opponent of the British policy in Portugal."

Sylvia went on to explain that it

Sylvia went on to explain that it was from the Portuguese government that the demand for justice upon the violator of the nunnery of Tavora emanated, and that Samoval's offer riage rolled to a standstill. The carriage door was fung open and a brace of footmen assisted the ladies to

(To be continued.)

Kilcreggan Fields.

Kilcreggan fields are patterned plain With green and brown and green The little dykes

Press On.

The road to success is no pathway of flowers.

It will test well your grit and persistence: There are rough tracks to traverse, thro' long weary hours, Ere the goal comes in sight in the distance. It matters but little what Art you es-

What tangled skein seek to unravel; To succeed, time will show, all the same price must pay-To "Get There" all the same road

Should Music her subtle spell o'er you have cast, must travel.

And you straightway resolve for to woo her, ltho' coy, you will find, ere a few moons have passed, She rewards those who boldly pursue her.

if at times she's cold, and on you seems to frown,

Yet her manners withal is beguiling; Tho' to-day seeming failure makes you feel cast-down, At to-morrow's success you'll be smiling.

Undaunted press on and the prize you will gain-That rich guerdon for which you have striven-The key to pure rapture, by which you'll obtain,

While on earth, a sweet fortaste of

-Richard Hartley, in "Music." Minard's Liniment for Neuraigia.

He-"Anyone can see a lot of grace n this step.

She-"Beg pardon! My name is Maude."

Make Your Own SOAP

and Save Money! All you need is waste fals and Full Directions With Every Can YOUR GROCER SELLS IT!

Her Own Fault.

The train was about to start when the door of a compartment containing a solitary commercial travelor was flung open and a young woman entered and dropped into a corner seat.

After a while the traveler said, politely: "Excuse me, miss, but-"If you speak or annoy me I'll call) the conductor " snapped the girl. The train rolled on, and after a lengthy pause the young man made an other attempt to speak, but again the girl threatened to give the alarm. At last the train slowed up at a stad tion and the traveler rose to his feet.

"I don't care whether you like it or not," he said, "but I want that bag of strawberries you've been sitting on for the last six miles."

The Correct Way.

"Georgia, I shouldn't slide down the banisters like that." "Wouldn't you, grandma? Show! • me how you'd do it."

A practical man is the uphoisterer; he's always getting down to brass; tacks.

MONEY WANTED

12% Paid on Amounts from $100 to $5,000. Best of Security. For full information address Mid-Continent Bond Corporation 331 Bay Street, Toronto 2 Enquiries treated confidentially.

Choose Your Own Prize

We will give you any one of the above prizes for selling of Waxed Sweet Peas at 15 cents a bunch. This is selling everybody will buy. Send your name and address NOW and be sure to say what prize you want. NEW IDEA GIFT CO. DEPT. F.10

WATERFORD, ONT.

Do You Roast

that is in an SMP Covered Roaster, which roasts meat or fowl deliciously tender, yet retains rich juices and full plumpness. Good cooks all use the SMP Covered Roaster now. To basting required! Reduces meat bills. Keeps were sweet and clean. Saves work and adreds of thousands of roasters now. 85c to $3.50, depending on size

y good merchant sells

Valuable Booklet 31 (4) 31 3 g splendid hints on selec-of meat, preparation for ng, roasting and carving

SHEET METAL PRODUCTS CO. OF CANADA, LID. TORONTO WINNIPEG