

TO SEE HER FAT GO

Cost This Woman 75c

If you are curious to know what is happening to her bust, waist, and hip measurements, read her letter:—

"I was 136 lbs. when I started taking Kruschen three months ago, and am now 162 lbs., and I hope to reduce my weight still more. Regarding my measurements before taking Kruschen: I was 41-ins. bust, 38-ins. waist, and 49-ins. hips, and now I am 39-ins. bust, 36-ins. waist, and 45-ins. hips, my age being 29 years. A 75c. bottle of Kruschen lasts me a month. I take one half-teaspoonful in a tumbler of hot water each morning before breakfast. Apart from losing weight, I feel so much better in health. I do not wake up in the morning still feeling tired, and do not get headaches like I used to. I cannot thank Kruschen enough."

—Miss) M. A. H.

Kruschen contains those six mineral salts, proportionately balanced, found in the waters of those famous European Spas used by generations of fat people to reduce weight.

Kruschen helps blood, nerves, glands and body organs to function properly—you gain new strength and energy—feel years younger—look better, work better.

First Newspaper Shown in New York

London Press Club Collection With Items 300 Years Old—Evolution of Press Reports from Death of Charles I to the Present

New York.—Two hundred rare old newspapers, forerunners of the papers of to-day, dating back three centuries and telling naively some of the great events in English history, are on exhibition here in connection with the annual meeting of The Associated Press.

The newspapers are the collection of the Press Club of London, which, in lending them, has permitted them to go out of London for the first time. The exhibition is sponsored by the Columbia University School of Journalism.

Dean Carl W. Ackerman, who arranged it, remarked that two considerations which still exist to-day—"selling and the danger of war"—gave birth to the idea of newspapers. "In the exhibit," Dean Ackerman said, "one may find the origin of the modern newspaper. The early pamphlets were written to interest business men and maintained a personal commercial character. Their object was advertising in embryo."

Execution of Charles Told

One of the most interesting exhibits is the pamphlet published by Peter Cole in 1648 telling of the execution of Charles I. It is prefaced with one of the earliest examples of newspaper headline. The dramatic death of the King is told in full detail in dialogue, part of which follows:

"King: When I put out my hands this way then—(stretching them out)

"After that, having said two or three words (as he stood) to himself with hands and eyes lift up; immediately stooping down, laid his Neck upon the Block: And then the Executioner, again putting his Hair under his Cap, the King said (thinking he had bin going to strike), Stay for the signe.

"Executioner: Yes, I will, and it please Your Majesty.

"And after a very little pause, the King stretching forth his hands, The Executioner at one blow, severed his head from his Body.

"That when the Kings head was cut off, the Executioner held it up, and shewed it to the Spectators.

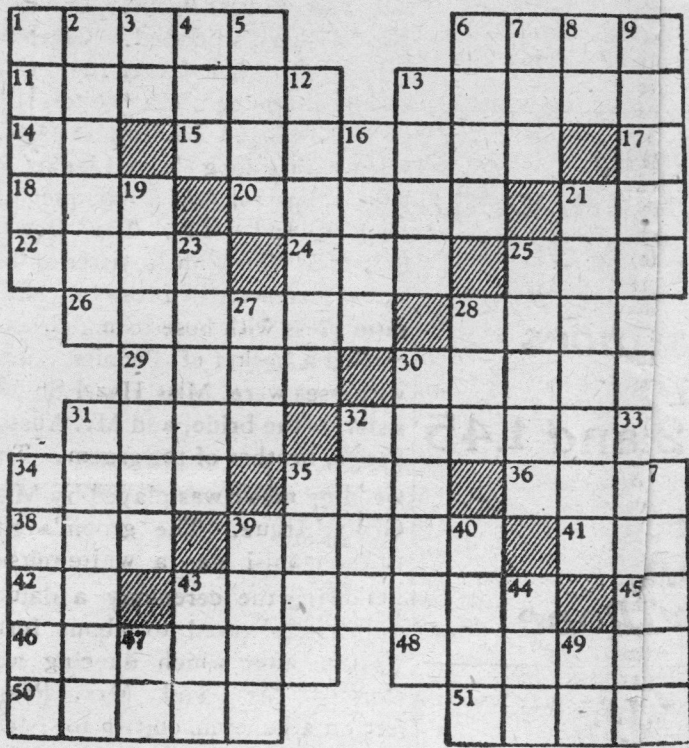

"And his Body was put in a Coffin, covered with black Velvet, for that purpose.

"The King's Body now lies in His Lodging Chamber in Whitehall."

The pamphlet ends solemnly with a line in large italics: "Sic Transit Gloria Mundi."

The newspaper in its primitive form, according to the Columbia School of Journalism, came to London from the Low Countries early in the seventeenth century. It was known as a "coranto," probably derived from current or curreto, to signify that it was relating "news while it is news." The Thirty Years' War was then in progress and the coranto, published irregularly, sprang up in London in 1621 to satisfy the demand for war reports. The next step was the appearance of the authorized "diudnals" of Parliament. News pamphlets in the exhibition record Parliamentary proceedings of the time, and also contain accounts of the battle between Blake and Van Tromp and de Rlyter, Cromwell's campaigns in Scotland and Ireland,

Veteran

The old man sits, bareheaded in the sun,
A battered hat beneath him on the grass,
And watches, lazily, the people pass,
The limping hours drag slowly, one by one.
Now it is four, and children homeward bound
Run by and wave at him; they know him well
As one who has a thousand tales to tell
Of ships and battles, treasure lost and found.
By five the ancient pipe he puffs is cold;
The gentle sun takes on a tinge of gold.
His eyes are closed, his thoughts have wandered far,
And head on chest, he dozes in the light,
To dream again that magic moonlit night
The British marched through sleeping Kandahar.

Schools Are Formed For Women Drivers

St. Louis.—A series of schools for women drivers has been inaugurated here by the St. Louis Safety Council. More than 200 women were recently "graduated" at the first school. The course consists of four meetings, of two hours each, at which a traffic court judge or some other traffic authority lectures. Written examinations are given at the conclusion of the course and a loving cup awarded the winner.

Real Sleuths

"What happened when the police searched your house?"
"It was fine! The police found the front-door key which my wife had hidden, a penny stamp I lost weeks ago, and four collar studs."

Then the Feathers Flew

A certain rather exclusive club had replaced its familiar black-coated male staff with young and, in some cases, pretty waitresses.
One day a member who had been strongly opposed to the change arrived at the club for lunch.
"How's the duck?" he asked an attractive waitress rather gruffly.
"Oh, I'm fine!" she replied. "And how's the old pelican feeling himself?"

Insistent

Pat, the Irishman, placed seven-and-sixpence on the counter at the village post office.
"I want a license for my mother, miss," he said to the postmistress. She gave him a superior look.
"You don't want a license for your mother," she replied.
"That I do," said Pat, "she's bought a dog."

Customer—"I don't like those shoes. The soles are too thick."
Salesman—"Then I can assure you, madam, that the objection will gradually wear away."

Some of the older people can still remember the time when the farmer with the ambitious daughter was finally induced to trade the old sorrel mare for an organ.

Chief—"You had yesterday off to go to your mother-in-law's funeral, and now I hear she is not dead."
Clerk—"Pardon me. I did not say she was dead. I merely said I would like to go to her funeral."

OFF COLOUR? HOW IS YOUR LIVER?

Wake up your Liver Bile Without Calomel

Your liver's a very small organ, but it certainly can put your digestive and eliminative organs out of kilter, by refusing to pour out its daily two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels. You won't completely correct such a condition by taking salts, oil, mineral water, laxative candy or chewing gum, or roughage. When they've moved your bowels they're through—and you need a liver stimulant.
