OUR ADVERTISERS

We would draw your attention to our advertisers who, through the medium of your paper, offer to you merchandise of quality at reasonable prices. Their merchandise is open to you for inspection; you see what you buy and pay for — and best of all your co-operation helps all of us.

This is not an unfair criticism of the mail order house, but did any mail order house really satisfy you over a period of time — give you consistent quantity and quality for your money, take an interest in the affairs of your community, serve your community faithfully, subscribe to your church, give you the odd packing case, exchange your produce for merchandise, help pay your taxes, encourage and advise you when you most needed it, help shoulder your responsibilities, help hold the community together and — let this jab where the jabbing is most tender — did the mail order houses ever advance you one iota of credit, financially or otherwise.

They don't and they won't do any of the above because it is not their policy. They don't want you, they want your money, and incidentally did you ever see or hear of a mail order house going out of business because people owed them money that was hard to get and hard to collect? As a matter of fact did you ever give it a thought? It really is about as simple as the explanation of a parasite or fungus growth — something that gets without giving. That is only too true of the mail order houses and you, gentle readers, are the fodder for these pests; you are the stalwart trees upon which the mail order fungus have established themselves. You give them your business, you pay cash and wouldn't your home town merchants smile if you dealt with him on just such a basis — just ask him if he would or if he would not smile — he would smile so broadly he would be biting his ears.

It seems to us that we people are possessed of more nerve than a canal horse — we honestly believe that there are people who would borrow the money from their merchants to buy merchandise from the mail order houses and not even thank the merchant for the loan. That is really what you do when you send your cash to the mail order houses and then buy on credit from the local merchants. But, gentle reader, just remember the tale of the pitcher that went to he well too often — we never miss the well till the well runs dry.

If our county merchants were to pass out of existence, with them would go one of the main pillars of our structure. Give them the help that they give you. They'll appreciate it and you will benefit eventually by it. Try it!

IN YOUR GARDEN AND IN MINE

During the past few months we gardeners have been busy working, planning, planting and transplanting these, those and them floral gems that we might make our gardens a thing of beauty and incidentally bring pleasure to not only ourselves but to the general public as well. We amateur gardeners derive a great deal of pleasure in experimenting with plants that are not at all common in the average garden and to sum it all up, "if I can grow it, so can you." that is a service that should be appreciated.

There really is a large number of plants, perennials at that, that are for various reasons decidedly unsuitable for our gardens, mostly because of climate conditions, severity of our winters, spreading hazard, and the glamorous descriptions sometimes attached to seeds which when planted produce miserable and not worth while plants and flowers. Your local amateur gardeners bear the brunt of these adventures into the little known realm of even the more common plants.

At this time of year a few hints on the wintering of plants would not be amiss. Of course the majority of homes have one or two rose bushes and the winter loss is high. This loss can be lessened if just a little protection is given. There are several methods of protection which should help and the most common and quite satisfactory method is the clay and sod bank. Perhaps we had better start off with a few don'ts.

Don't cover your rose bushes before the ground is frozen because mice will make the litter or rose cover into a winter home and in all probability eat the cane bark and

OBITUARY

MRS. FELIX BARKLEY

Tribute to the memory of the late Katherine McDiarmid, widow of Felix Barkley, who died on Friday, was paid by many friends at the funeral Tuesday afternoon at Vars. The mourners gathered at the residence of her son, Alexander (Sandy) where Rev. J. G. Patterson, pastor of Knox United Church conducted the service at 2 o'clock. Interment took place in the family plot at North Russell cemetery.

Surviving are five sons, Arthur, of Limerick, Sask.; Norman, of Kemptville; Silas, Alexander, and John, of Vars, and one daughter, Mrs. H. Hill, Vars, and three grandchildren. Among the beautiful floral offerings was a token from Knox United Church.

The pallbearers were: Elvin Hill, Ernest Barkley, Alex Simser, Hugh McDermid, Walter Fitzsimmons, and Miles Johnston.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

The Central Committee wish to thank all those who gave so generously of their time and means in order that a carload of vegetables, etc. could be sent to the needy district of Truax, Sask.

NOTICE

Any person acquainted with the late Margaret Paterson, formerly of Osgoode, Ontario, who died in the Ontario Hospital, Brockville, on July 13th, 1918, or with the late Joseph and Sarah Paterson, brother and sister of the said Margaret Paterson, please communicate with the undersigned.

destroy the rose. Don't completely cover the bush with sacking because you will have to cut back the bush in the spring. This applies to hybrid teas.

The former don't is the most important of the two and now we will deal with a few of the things you should do. In wrapping up a rose bush for winter place a piece of strong cord or binder twine half way up and around the bush, then pull the canes together and tie. Here the bush is in position for proper wrapping or winding with old burlap, bagging or old coats. Those must be firmly tied in place. A few sods and ground banked up against the bush will help protect the roots. Polyantha roses should have much the same protection and rambler or climbing roses should be bagged and gradually bent down until you can safely cover them. Don't be afraid if there is a possibility of snow sifting or drifting in or over the bush because snow is a splendid protection. The idea that we cover rose bushes to keep them from freezing is just a trifle wrong. We cover rose bushes to keep them frozen or rather to keep them dormant. The idea really is that with the first warm days in February, March, the plant if not protected will start to awaken from its sleep or dormancy and send sap up into the canes. Freezing cold weather follows these early thaws and freezes the sap in the canes. The frozen sap expands, the cane breaks and the rose bush has a splendid start for the garbage pile. So bear this reason in mind and when covering be sure to thoroughly protect at least six inches of cane of the Tea rose and all of the climber canes. You don't cut back the climber as much as you do the Hybrid tea.

Enough about roses; let's turn to a few other plants. Peonies that you planted this year need protection; Iris and a few other plants need protection, and the easiest and most satisfactory way that I know of is to cover with a good heavy sod; cut about two inches deep and about the size of a snow shovel. Again it is not the fear of freezing as the fear of heaving the plants so much that the main and hair roots will be destroyed, broken.

Shrubby and evergreens used for base planting should be covered with boxes or banana crates and especially where there is bound to be snow falling off house or verandah roof.

Clematis, Dutchman's pipe and Honeysuckle vines should be carefully lowered and given protection although it is not absolutely necessary.

Well, heigh-ho for this week and I hope the above ideas help you in your garden.

Liver Oil, Halibut or Cod

At this season of the year everyone, adults and children, should take some form of Liver Oil to strengthen their lungs against Colds. Medical Science recommends either Cod Liver Oil or Halibut Liver Oil extracted from the Fresh Livers of these respective fish. But Read Carefully — THEY MUST BE RICH IN VITAMINES! You can buy cheap oils, but their vitamine content is small. Cheap oil means money wasted. Insist on High Vitamin Content. WE CARRY THIS BRAND.

HALIBUT LIVER OIL CAPSULES $1.00 box for those who do not like Cod Liver Oil.

MALT EXTRACT and HALIBUT LIVER OIL $1.50 bot. Absolutely free from fishy taste or fishy smell.

RADIO MALT EXTRACT $1.50 bottle — Rich in Vitamins, but no oil present. A real malt extract.

EXTRACT OF COD LIVER $1.00 — Pleasant tasting — Also contains iron, quinine and hypophosphites.
