The first group of Western cattle brought here for feeding was readily disposed of.

Ned Sparks Big Attraction

ST. THOMAS. — Passing a big automobile owned by Ned Sparks, the motion-picture comedian, on the long, winding hill leading into the Waterworks Park, a youth drove his old automobile into the fence along the hillside and smashed into a pole carrying Hydro power to the city's pumping station. The accident snapped the pole and cut off the power to the station for nearly two hours until Public Utilities Commission men could fix up an emergency service. The youth is believed to have been looking at Sparks, and his auto so intently that he failed to see where he was going until he sheaved off the side of the road. Damage will total about $50.

Accused Makes a Clean Breast of His Innocence

LOS ANGELES. — Asked if he could identify Harry Geer, in court on a forgery charge, as the culprit, witness Harry Greenberg, replied "I can't tell definitely unless he opens his shirt at the neck. The man who forged the cheque had lots of hair on his chest." Geer opened his shirt, bared his chest. It was as smooth as an onion. "Case dismissed," said the court.

Walker Not Candidate For New York Mayoralty

NEW YORK. — The name of James J. Walker was mentioned in some Tammany quarters as a possible candidate in New York's mayoralty campaign, but the dapper, former mayor quickly eliminated himself from the picture. "I'm on the jury now," Walker said upon leaving a white house chat with President Roosevelt in Washington. "I only listen to arguments, and don't intend to take part in any of them."

Groceryman's Watchdog

BRANDENTON, Fla. — H. E. Mower, Brandenton grocer, objects to the persistent casting of the snake as the villain in fiction, and says his ten-foot boa constrictor was the hero of a real life crime story. Mower said thieves pried open a rear window of his store and entered the building. They left in a hurry without loot and even forgot the crowbar they used to open the window. Mower says he's convinced the gleam of the serpent's eyes in a flashlight beam—with perhaps a hiss thrown in—caused the flight.

Westerners to Help Harvest

KITCHENER. — Things have changed. A few years ago Waterloo Co. youths used to go West on the "harvesters' excursions." Now it was learned here that two Saskatchewan youths, 21 and 20, will leave their homes there next week seeking farm work in Waterloo County. They will probably get it, Employment Bureau officials declare.

New Trick

NORTH YORK. — A new trick of hitch-hikers to obtain rides into the city was revealed this week to a motorist on Dufferin Street.

P.C. Weller (412) of Toronto, and Mrs. Weller, were driving on Dufferin Street when they spied a lad of about 18 lying on his back with both arms outstretched and his legs about three feet on the pavement, in the path of their car.

As the prostrate boy was motionless, they presumed he had been the victim of a hit-and-run driver, and was either unconscious or dead. Stopping their car quickly, they hurried to him, only to have him jump to his feet and ask for a ride into the city. "Apparently he had been unsuccessful in 'thumbing' a ride and tried this new way of getting some motorist to stop," commented P.C. Weller, who added that the incident had rather frightened and upset Mrs. Weller.

Second Plane To Cross Sea

MONTREAL. — Sister ship of the huge flying boat Caledonia, Imperial Airways' Cambria will take off from Foynes, Ireland, during the first week of August on a North Atlantic crossing, Trans-Canada Air Line Officials announced here this week.

Cable advices received here by the company and the Cambria would follow the same trail-blazing course of the Caledonia, which completed its westward crossing in four legs. From Southampton the Cambria would go to Foynes, then to Botwood, Nfld., on to Montreal, and from there to Port Washington, N.Y.

The Pan American Clipper III, which completed a two-way flight of the North Atlantic at the same time as the Caledonia, but in reversed order, also will make the crossing some time in August.

The Cambria, after completing the fourth leg of its journey, may visit Windsor, Toronto and Hamilton. If the Cambria is unable to do so, the Caledonia will visit the three Ontario cities when it makes its third Atlantic flight.

Round-World Flight Hinted

EDMONTON. — Aviation officials here speculated on the possibility of a secret round-the-world airplane flight being made in the near future with a refueling stop at Edmonton, where a consignment of more than 600 gallons of high-test gasoline arrived from New York and San Francisco and forty-five gallons of special oil from Germany. Identity of the flier who is believed planning a world-girdling flight, with a scheduled take-off about the first of next week, was not learned. Persistent rumors in flying circles here have indicated such a flight is pending.

Forced Landing Without Mishap

BELLEVILLE. — Robert Newman and Chick Dixon, of Akron, O., made a forced landing in the village of Shannonville, five miles east of here, when their plane ran out of gasoline. After filling their tanks from the pumps of a local garage, the two fliers continued on their way eastward. The fliers were unhurt and their plane was undamaged.

It has been estimated that the number of families on American farms during 1936 totalled 7,464,000.

| ATTACKING RABBIT PESTS | | |
|--|--|--|
| CANTON.—Australia's Council for Scientific and Industrial Research has laid plans for a new attack on the Commonwealth's rabbit hordes with a new virus disease developed in England by Sir Henry Martin. The attack will be launched on Clarke Island off the Tasmanian coast and, if successful there will be extended to the mainland. First tests will determine whether the disease myxomatosis, is fatal only to rabbits as Sir Henry claims. If such is the case, infected rabbits will be turned loose on the island to spread the disease among their entire species. | | |

NEWS PARADE

Commentary on the HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEKS NEWS ---

By Peter Randal

The world this week saw the Spanish war sweeping to a climax while in the far East the first rumbles of a new conflict were heard.

Lashing out from Madrid, General Jose Mlaja's re-organized Loyalist army executed its first great offensive in the year-old civil war and struck fifteen miles into the insurgent ring which almost surrounded Madrid and threatened General Francisco Franco's line of communication with the sea. Franco struck back with a violent counter-offensive in an attempt to regain lost territory before the Loyalists could strengthen their newly won positions.

Hundreds of planes, tons of high explosives, and a quarter of a million men were hurled by both armies at the point of the loyalists' newly-won salient in the mountains at Brunete, 12 miles west of Madrid. This may be the deciding battle of the civil war. If the Rebels are driven back from the position they have held for nearly a year at the gates of Madrid it is likely that new agreements will be formed by the great European powers with Germany and Italy withdrawing much of the support which has so far bolstered the Rebel attack. One million men, women and children have lost their lives, it is estimated since the war began on July 19, 1937.

Japan's militant imperialist government which has held the nation in readiness for war for several years, made its first move in North China this week when Nipponese troops entered Mopei province which adjoins Japanese territory in newly-conquered Manchukuo.

Japanese soldiers were repulsed however by unexpected and determined opposition by Chinese Communist and Bandit troops, united against the Japanese threat, under the Nankin government. Peace overtures have been made by Tokio and an armistice is expected to relieve the troubled situation in the Far East.

With Soviet Russia disturbed by espionage trials and the execution of army leaders it is not unlikely that Japan will push forward in her march toward the rich stores of war materials in the heart of China.

Hope died this week in two widely distant parts of the world. In the Pacific ocean's wide southern expanse where the United States navy completed its two weeks, $4,000,000 search for Amelia Earhart and Geo. Noonan, and on the wide stretches of Western Canada's wheat country where farmers faced the greatest crop failure in the history of the west.

The United States navy after combing 200,000 square miles of trackless ocean for the lost fliers, gave up hope and pronounced them dead. The only gain from their attempted trans-Pacific flight being the U. S. government's warning "Such flights will not be permitted in future."

Federal Minister of Agriculture James G. Gardiner predicted this week in Ottawa that this year's wheat crop would be not over 150 million bushels, the smallest since the west first became a great wheat-producing area.

Saskatchewan bore the brunt of the drought and 114 degree heat and Gardiner estimated that 600,000 or 66 per cent. of the population would need government aid of some kind before the winter was over.

Following his announcement the Federal government led by recently returned Premier King promised immediate and planned remedial action and better still, heavy rains fell for several days in most parts of the southern Saskatchewan dust bowl as well as in the northern parts of the province.

Hardy westerners immediately washed off their sense of humor and produced drought jokes of which the following is a sample. The rains were so heavy around Shaunavon, dust bowl centre, that a large drop struck a farmer on the forehead and knocked him to the ground unconscious, and the hired man had to throw three buckets of dust over him to revive him.

Tall girls all over the land rejoiced when they read that Miss Toronto 1937, chosen after a week's elimination was statuette 17-year-old Billie Hallam, five feet ten and a half inches in height and weighing approximately 150 pounds (she wasn't quite sure). This fine Canadian lassie is an accomplished softball pitcher and says she owes her success to her Irish mother and English father, also she eats anything she likes and hopes to get into the movies. The 20,000 spectators who attended the police games at which Miss Hallam was chosen as Toronto's loveliest all agreed that the judges picked a typical and admirable Canadian girl and one well qualified to represent the city in Hollywood.

Three day sensations in Canadian newspapers were many this week, featured by the discovery and conviction on bigamy charges of George Roediger, a modern Bluebeard if there ever was one. This dark and handsome 55-year-old German had married, robbed and deserted at least ten women in all parts of Canada in the last ten years. He pleaded guilty and received nine years in Stony Mountain penitentiary but alert provincial police Sergeant McKay, of Toronto, thinks that the case is not yet closed, for Roediger is alleged to have caused the disappearance of Mrs. Christina MacKenzie whom he married in Barrie, Ont., in 1935. Mrs. MacKenzie has not been seen since she left a house on Vaughan Rd., Toronto, a few days after her marriage.

Outside of a postcard, allegedly from her, but thought to be a forgery, that her relatives received in December, 1935, there is no trace of the missing widow.

Two of Roediger's former wives died violent deaths, one by poisoning, the other by drowning in a well. In the latter case Roediger was charged with murder and acquitted although he served two years in a New York prison for bigamy in the same case. The finding of sharp butcher knives and quantities of arsenic in his luggage by police after his recent arrest increased suspicion that this sinister and handsome fortune hunter left many mysteries unsolved in his obscure past. Roediger's son is being sought by police in California for questioning on his father's activities and the fly-by-night German Romeo may yet face changes more serious than bigamy.
