Manual Training At S.S. Number Two

At the last annual meeting of S.S. No. 2 it was decided that manual training be taught in the school. Shortly after this meeting a small number of tools were procured and a hundred feet of lumber. Actual work began in February, and from that time they have made about five models, samples of which may be seen in the window of The Leader office during this week-end.

In criticizing the models, one must realize that there was no regular work bench and no vise of any description available. It should also be remembered that children, ranging in ages from 8 to 12 made them. To the skilled woodworker these articles may seem very crude; but to these children they are masterpieces, belonging to them, because they alone created them.

Every spare moment was utilized by the pupil in this work. Every recess found the class busy in this industry. It was an incentive to the pupil to do better work in the other classes, because it would be a terrible calamity if improper work in other classes kept a pupil from doing his woodwork.

Have a look at these models. Pass your comments along to the boys and girls. Let the manual training teacher know how you feel concerning this subject. The class and the teacher wish to extend their thanks to The Leader office for the use of their window, which made this display possible.

WEDDING

Bring Your Job Work to "The Russell Leader"

STILL PIONEERING

Leadership demands constant pioneering—discovering and developing the new and better method of doing the things we have to do.

Time was when the introduction of a new implement was a memorable and historic event, but these were the early days in the application of mechanics to farming operations. Today, changes succeed each other with greater rapidity and even the most revolutionary innovations are accepted with little acclaim.

Not in any period of the ninety years of Massey-Harris history has such skill been employed in the designing and developing of machines for the farm as there is today. The Company's engineers, in their extensive field experiments, are constantly testing new ideas and developing, under actual conditions, machines and attachments specifically suited to the requirements of the territory for which they are intended.

Thus, whether it be a one-handed walking plow to be used by a native, and even perhaps drawn by natives, on the South African veldt; a power-driven mower to cope with the luxuriant growth of grass on an English meadow, or the One-Way Disc Seeder developed to help the farmer on the prairies of Western Canada combat soil drifting, it is the result of definite scientific research by the Company's field engineers.

And in the motorized mechanization that is taking place in farming operations, Massey-Harris is in the forefront, still pioneering in bringing to farmers the latest developments in Tractors, Combines and other power equipment.
