I have no problem with paying a fee to run a fundraising event, a wedding reception or party in a hall, but meetings and recreation activities should be without charge. This was the policy that they adopted in 1998 but now they have changed it without ever having advertised their intentions to the public.

I hope every volunteer and volunteer group writes a letter to the Council and lets them know how they feel.

the year of our Lord'. But enough of the history lesson - just put your mind to worrying about the computers that run the world. They may have a problem and through them, so might we. Some genuine geniuses figured that time would stop at midnight December 31st, 1999 or at least that's what they in effect told the computers they were building. And there's not a whole heck of a lot that most of us can do about this problem either, except maybe see that we have oil for our lamps and some cash in the sock under the mattress just in case the lights go out and the bank machines won't work.

Murray Head has been given the job of setting groups in this community to thinking about what would be a fitting commemoration to celebrate the new millennium.
