

Cards - Cont'd from page 5

One after another, the players fall into a deep slumber, close to a coma. Slowly the midnight chorus of the swamp things rises to a crescendo. Think about it. Seven or eight fat guys in a dead sleep on their backs, their honks, grunts, whines, whistles and snorts thrumming through the walls, turning the residence into a gigantic acoustical wind instrument.

Thus, there is no escape from the card game. Any person who would wager money on these games has to be at least partially demented. That's why my friends play. And that's why I play with them.

Crouse, Mary Creasy and Alice Miller will help Marge and Sid Drury decorate Clifford Vancott's truck on Thursday, September 16th at 7:00 p.m. Clifford and Ruth have volunteered to drive the truck in the parade again. Thanks folks. We appreciate your help.

Our Harvest Tea on Saturday, October 16th, was discussed. We will have home baking, crafts, touch and take, garden produce and white elephant as usual. Our evening was finalized with a delicious lunch provided by Dorothy Langridge and Eleanor Forbes and our hostesses were thanked on behalf of the group by Marg. Purcell.
