when 'the big cat' was placed in the water for the very first time was yet another indication of the friendliness of our neighbors who had turned out in numbers to cheer on a local boat builder. Talking about 'cats,' even our dogs have got in on the act as they look forward to receiving their dog biscuit from the gas bar attendant as 'mum or dad' fill up with gas.

What is it I wonder, which will change me/us from a city suburbanite to a person from the County. It will be difficult if not impossible to hide my Scottish Accent (obtained in the first 24 years of my life)...but there again I don't really know if there is a strong 'County accent to gain.' Worship in local churches is one area which I do not have to spend much time learning, having come from a country pastoral charge near the big city. Perhaps I need to follow the example of our two dogs. For them, grass is just grass and a tree is a tree. Accept it as my new surroundings; learn to love it, which I do, and continue to thank God for each and every day which is sent to me and the opportunity to sample yet another batch of home made jam or one of Alice's great country eggs.

seat." Hughie, knowing full well he was in the right and the woman in the wrong, indignantly replied, "I have a ticket for J - 11. This is J - 11."

This bothered the woman a little, and she screamed, "Get the #$@& out of my seat before I punch you in the mouth."

Poor Hughie. He paled, and with rightfully felt fear, gave up his seat. There was quiet laughter from the surrounding men. Not too loud, mind you, for fear this woman would hear it and let loose on someone else.

These are just a few of the incidents. There were many others. Hughie's golf cart rolling into the pond and tipping over with a client's golf clubs in it, Hughie selling his car and discovering he had lost his wedding ring in it, Hughie launching his boat while it was still tied to the car, or slamming into a sofa with his car on the Autoroute. He was just accident prone. I don't know why this happens to an unfortunate few, but it ...damn, I just spilled coffee on the keybrud. I h#pe it doe&#n't wrec(my c0nt$$ER.
