know that the fork was her way of telling them that..... "the best was yet to come."

As you may or may not have guessed, I was that pastor and NO, I am sorry if I disappoint you but there was no fork in her hand. There was however, a "FORK" in the lasting message that Carrie, who died before she could receive a new heart, wanted her friends and the community to know. Her "Fork" came in the words of a Johnny Nash song she asked me to play for her at the start of her service of celebration, and I share them with you:

I can see clearly now, the rain is gone,
I can see all obstacles in my way
Gone are the dark clouds that had me blind
It's gonna be a bright (bright), bright (bright)
Sun-Shiny day.

I think I can make it now, the pain is gone
All of the bad feelings have disappeared
Here is the rainbow I've been praying for

It's gonna be a bright (bright), bright (bright)
Sun-Shiny day.

Carrie (and I know she will forgive me for using her name), had discovered for herself what I believe we all should do. She saw herself as a person of Body, Mind and Spirit with a body that was failing her. Her Good Friday experience surely gave way to the joy of an Easter Sunday, and those family and friends who attended her service on that day left knowing that their lives had been touched in a very special way.

As Christians approach the high point of their year they will only be able to fully appreciate the "fork" in its message if they have had it removed from them on Good Friday.

What's in it for ME... what's in it for US?
If we are blessed, perhaps a fork with a promise.

Pastor Ian.
