Grow Your Own

By Sarah Moran Nancy Butler

It is finally spring its arrival so welcome and longed for, especially this year. Didn't your heart just leap at the sound of red-winged blackbirds and peepers? To catch a glimpse of a butterfly, like the mourning cloak, might even cause you to imagine that summer could happen one day.

So, "Grow Your Own" is back, to bring a little extra encouragement and inspiration to the vegetable grower in you. Selfishly, we want to see lots of your glowing, bright, beautiful and delicious produce entered into the Milford Fair in September.

Also, it somehow feels, when growing vegetables, that everything you do connects you back to the long line of county farmers and farmers' wives who have dug, weeded and tended their plots to feed and raise families here.

They say that spring comes early to farmers and vegetable gardeners, combing through seed catalogues and eagerly awaiting the moment when the soil is warm enough; or, according to the Farmer's Almanac, waiting for the moon to be just right. With the Full Flower moon or Corn Planting moon on its way in May, you might want to experiment with an old-time farmer practice for a larger, tastier harvest: above ground crops should be planted during the light, or waning of the moon and below ground crops during the dark, or waxing of the moon.

Happy plotting and planting!
