moment without some noise, listen to music. Probably HipHop, which seems to consist of a person screaming incomprehensible stream-of-consciousness lyrics without a tune, accompanied only by a big bass beat. I know, I know, this is typical old person grumbling. Well, yes it is, and I admitted to it right up front.

I learn a lot traveling, though I hate to admit it. Florida seems to have no sense of the struggles the rest of the world has with pollution and waste. They don't recycle, even a little bit. No blue boxes, nothing. Everything goes in the big garbage bags or down the chute in the condos. Bottles, newspapers, garbage, everything. Scattered about the state are mountainous landfills. The turkey vultures and gulls can be seen miles away, a dead giveaway. Maybe there's a state law against old cars. Cars seem all brand new, and most of them are big and expensive. I saw my first Lincoln pick-up truck. I can understand, though not relate very well, to someone acquiring a big luxury car. But if you're buying a pick-up truck, why would you want a luxury one? I guess the owner would rent a truck if he had to carry something messy. Then again, if you owned a Lincoln pick-up, you'd
