The 2008 event also features an expanded exhibitor area showcasing 50 regional businesses, services and organizations.

Maya Navrot, Conservation Education Coordinator with Quinte Conservation and Symposium Co-organizer says "it's encouraging to see how much interest there is locally, some come to learn how to reduce their environmental impact while others are looking at how to save money, go off-grid or simply meet other like-minded individuals."

Pre-registration is required and spaces are limited. To register online for the 2008 Sustainable Living Symposium and for more information on speakers and sessions visit their newly launched Quinte Sustainability website at www.quintesustainability.ca.

Admission is $30.00 per person or $20.00 for students, and includes a locally produced lunch.
