everything and send them the bill. It was a tidy sum too, and I really did only replace what was lost.

You would think that bird watching would be cheap, wouldn't you? Well, it's not. At Point Pelee this year (no better than our own Point, by the way, though much more famous), the birders were staggering under the load of tens of thousands of dollars of photographic equipment, binoculars that would make a voyeur swoon with envy, all strapped to exotic outdoor clothing that would buy eternal booze for a bum.

My problem is I have several hobbies, none of which I am good at, and I keep attempting to improve the equipment instead of my skills. This strategy doesn't work, but if it did, it would make life a heck of a lot easier.
