

Prince Edward Point Bird Observatory's Fabulous Festive Holiday Auction Runs Till December 11

welcome to join PEPtBO as members to make a difference in bird conservation and research!

PEPtBO recently concluded its nighttime migration monitoring and research, focused on Northern Saw-whet Owls, a frequently-banded owl species in North America. The Saw-whet Owl Banding program from September 20th to October 31st saw the banding of 280 Northern Saw-Whet Owls, six Barred Owls, and one Eastern Screech Owl. The support of donors, partners, volunteers, banding staff, and event attendees throughout the month made for a banner year in support of owl migration research.

This year for the first time, PEPtBO offered the opportunity for virtual adoptions of one of the Saw-whet owls banded during the season. To date, there have been seventy-one adoptions through the Adopt-an-Owl Program. As of time of print, there are eight owls still available for adoption. These symbolic adoptions play a crucial role in supporting the organization's research. Here's a link to the Adopt-an-Owl Program: <https://peptbo.ca/adopt-an-owl/> Thank you to all who contributed!
