

There was no contractor in Canada who was better known or liked than James Isbester, a large man both in stature and mind. He was always generous and considerate to those who worked for him in his many large undertakings.