This is an enlargement reproduced from Photograph No. 4. Taken in the early summer of 1946 from the top of a Canadian Pacific Railway box car parked on the yard track close to the east end of Black siding the photograph looks generally west. The track to the immediate right or north of the yard track on which the railway cars are parked is the passing track, with the Canadian Pacific Railway main line track immediately to the right of the passing track. To the right of the main line track and reaching into the background work can be seen in progress for the new railway yard being built by the Canadian Pacific Railway to serve Kimberly Clark's proposed mill. Several of the yard tracks have been laid and ballasting is in progress.
