

Eskimos Visit Reserve (continued)

At New Central School, the Eskimos found a few old friends. Dr. Jerry Harwood and Miss Nina Burnham, Dr. Harwood's assistant who have both travelled on medical missions through Eskimo land in the past summers.

Aids Understanding

Al Simpson, a former Brantford man and district superintendent of adult education for Eskimos (department of Indian affairs and northern development) said the tour is of valuable assistance in broadening the understanding of the Eskimo.

"These people will go home with their stories of the southern lands and tell their friends. This way, we can educate so many people. If a government man were to go north, it would take at least three years just to learn the language," he said. "Besides that, the government man would be trying to communicate his ideas of the south. This way, the Eskimos will get the Eskimo version of what things down here are really like. It's a different ball game," he added.

During the dinner at the Anglican Church at Ohsweken, the Eskimos were welcomed in Mohawk, Cayuga, Seneca and Onondaga languages, none of which they understood. They did, however, recognize the smiling faces and warm handshakes.

Most of all, home got a little closer and at the same time a little farther away when two young Indian boys staged an impromptu and jovial boxing match during a tea break at the New Credit Reserve. The one-round event attracted the attention of every Eskimo in the building and thoughts of home seemed to grip everyone as they smiled and watched the two children.

The tour ended with the benediction delivered by Canon W. J. Zimmerman at Mohawk Chapel. A service was delivered in Eskimo and in English.

Saturday, the group began the long flight home. "I'm sure they are filled with enough sights and sounds and new stories to tell their fellow Eskimos for a long time," said Mr. Simpson.
