An original recipe (Potatoes)

Did you ever originate a recipe? If not, here's one to try.

Pare and wash enough medium to large sized potatoes for 2 meals. Cut in half lengthwise. Cook in boiling water. It requires half the cooking time and do not overcook. Serve as it is.

For the second meal prepare enough of the left over potatoes for roasting on top of the stove in your heavy skillet. Flour potatoes, this can be quickly done by sprinkling or putting each half potato separately in a paper bag with a little flour and shaking lightly.

Use enough margarine in your skillet to prevent burning. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and paprika if desired. Cover and brown on each side. In 10 minutes you will have delicious browned, roasted potatoes.

Here's another potato recipe sent in by a reader. Can't vouch for it - any one ever tried it?

Peeling a Potato

If you see a girl you would like to marry manage somehow to see her peel potatoes. If she cuts the peelings very thick you will know she's extravagant. If she leaves the eyes in, she is lazy. If she washes them in only one water, she is a poor housekeeper. If she lets them burn, she is careless, and would make a poor wife.

But if you find a girl who knows how to take a potato, peel it, wash it well and boil it. Marry her whether she is pretty or not. Poor or rich. She will make a good wife. Name withheld.
