CHILDREN'S PAGE - Contid ...

Anyway, you've helped them When their little clouds were black.

Smile a little more at people.
As a mirror then you'll see,
Most faces will reflect righ back that smile, which is a key,
Which opens up most barriers that people carry round;

A kind of armour plating, under which their hearts are found.
Listen patiently to people when they tell their woes to you;
Even listening will help them through.

The least that one can do.
In this world we all have crosses.
It will halp you bear your own.

It will halp you bear your own, If you stop and ease the burden Of one who walks along. Don't form bad opinions from the Stories that you hear,

Of people whom you've never met,

So commonly done, I fear
But judge these people only when
You've met them face to face.

Then form your own opinion,
The fairest way, in any case.
The old folk in their eventide,
Each one of us should try,

Each one of us should try,
To brighten their surroundings,
Keep their spirits running high.
Most old folks have their memories

Most old folks have their memories
Of which they love to tell.
Won't you sit awhile and listen

Won't you sit awhile and listen
Till its past their evening bell?
So try to understand each soul,

Seek good, to faults be blind And try to lend that "helping hand"

Above all things, be kind,
For the world itself is beautiful;
The people make it sad.
Won't you live like one *"The Carpenter"

And help the world be glad?

*Juniors, "The Carpenter" refers to Jesus. He worked in a Carpenter shop.
