would ask that there be more and clearer signs marking the various routes to Pauline Johnson park.

"You could get lost, especially once you get onto the reserve because the streets aren't well marked. We stopped to ask some kids for directions just so we wouldn't go a half-hour out of our way by mistake."

Katherine Bunn of Hamilton was at the opening ceremonies on Saturday and she was taken back from all of the elements of this years' powwow, the first that she has ever attended.

"I'm astounded, I was watching the opening ceremonies and had goose bumps", she said. "The spirituality that you feel is very powerful. You feel a respect and a wisdom that you want to be connected to when you come here and it is quite the experience, one that I have enjoyed."

More than 15,000 people showed up for the 19th Annual Champion of Champions Pow Wow
