

Non-Natives disapprove of “Peacekeepers” photo surveillance

By Jim Windle
HALDIMAND

If you're one of thousands of non-Native customers of Native owned smoke shacks, smile, Big Brother will be watching you.

A small group of Caledonia and area citizens have announced they will be photographing and videotaping the license plate numbers and faces of anyone frequenting a Native smoke hut and handing that information over to the RCMP.

According to a media release, the Caledonia Militia (Peacekeepers) will be turning the cameras on Canadian citizens and travelers coming through the area who may stop to buy tobacco products at a smoke hut, according to Doug Fleming, co-founder of what was once called the Caledonia Militia, but later hastily changed to “Caledonia Peacemakers” after a strong negative reaction from other Caledonia and area citizens, the OPP, as well as Six Nations and

Continued on page 2