NAMES MAY STILL BE ADDED TO VOTERS' LIST

Another Opportunity Provided for Those Who Failed to Register.

The following despatch from Ottawa is self-explanatory:—

Although the registration of voters for the Federal elections closed on Saturday, another opportunity is provided for those who neglected to register, to place their names on the lists. The voters' lists, prepared by the registrars in cities, towns and villages of over 2,500 population, have been handed to the judges of the county courts or judicial districts, and revising officers appointed by these judges will sit for six days, from Monday, November 19, for the purpose of adding names or making other authorized changes. Substitutions cannot be made unless two days' notice by registered letter is given to the persons objected to. Places where revising officers will sit will be advertised for four days.

If a person has been refused registration, he or she can, without previous notice, appear before the revising officers in person and ask to be registered. Mistakes such as the misspelling of names of streets may be corrected without notice.

Revising officers must, twelve days before polling day, Thursday, November 24, certify their lists and hand the candidates in their districts a statement of the changes. They must also have their lists printed and four days prior to election day will deliver 20 copies to each candidate.

In towns and villages of 2,500 and less, as well as in rural or township polls, a registrar will make a list of all persons qualified. Up to November 18 he can add names from other lists, names handed to him, or names which he secures himself. In fact rural registrars are supposed to personally see that every proper name is on their lists. After November 18, rural lists are posted up for inspection and additions may be made as late as the night of the tenth day before election.

Any person in rural localities who, on election day, finds his name is not on the list, may vote in the division in which he lives by being vouched for by any person whose name does appear on the lists.

WRIGHT-HARGREAVES MINE DIVIDEND PAYER SOON

The first dividend to be paid by the Wright-Hargreaves Mines at Kirkland Lake is announced for January 1st, 1922, to shareholders of record of Dec. 17th, 1921. This first Wright-Hargreaves dividend is for 5 per cent. of the capital stock issue, and it will require a disbursement of $125,000.00.

The Wright-Hargreaves put in a mill of 175 tons during 1920, and started production in May of this year. Almost from the opening of the mill about 150 tons have been treated daily and the production has approximated about $2,000 per day. It is said that a surplus sufficient to pay the dividend has been built up since January, 1921, with, something extra left in the treasury.

The Wright-Hargreaves is financed by Buffalo business men, and the property has always been conducted on the right sort of basis.

SOLID GROWTH, THOUGH SLOW, USUALLY THE BEST

It is generally recognized that the chief need of the North Land is what may be termed proper publicity. The people of this North Land rightly believe that if the people of other parts of this province and other provinces and countries fully realized the resources and possibilities of this land development would be materially accelerated. In other words the ordinary North Land man wants the facts about this country to be generally known, believing that these facts will tell their own story and bring great results. Nothing more than the simple unadorned facts are desired or required. Some weeks ago an old timer in this district gave The Advance a little calling-down because this paper appeared to be inclined to discourage any hopes for progress in the gold camps in the North Land through the securing of the interest in these camps of such men as Thomas W. Lawson. The Advance suggested that flamboyant species of Advertising, exaggerated claims or two noisy propaganda tended to produce unfavorable re-actions. This country has spectacular ore a plenty and so can perhaps prosper more with a conservative policy of propaganda than with hysterical advertising. For a brief time the too strenuous forms of publicity about a mining camp create widespread interest and notice. But if the advertising runs too far before results reactions ensue. The steady, well-warranted, quiet growth is the better. The proof of this may be clearly seen in the case of Porcupine. Contrast Porcupine's steady growth with the experience of other camps that have attempted boom methods, and in the end it will be admitted that the safest and surest growth is only by means that are fair and straight and safe. Too noisy methods seldom attract the notice of the right type of people. However, it may be said here that neither boom methods nor their reactions will permanently keep a good camp from being given its chance eventually. The West Shiningtree Camp is a case in point. At one time much interest was created in West Shiningtree by the advertising of regular wholesale selling of stock in companies organized to mine in Shiningtree. For a time the public regarded the name of Shiningtree as a sort of shining light, but the reaction naturally came and for some time some of the extravagant claims made in some of the stock promotions tempted the public to take an extremely adverse view of Shiningtree. Old-time prospectors and mining men continued to have faith in West Shiningtree. They believed it might deliver the goods. They knew it was worth investigating in any event. Among others prominent in mining matters, Mr. Percy Hopkins, geologist for the Ontario Government, and Mr. Alfred R. Whitman, of New York, reported favourably on West Shiningtree. More recently the Hollinger interests have sent men in to investigate some promising property in the West Shiningtree area, and those who have held their faith in the district through the dulled days are now encouraged to their old-time optimism. It is likely that a comparatively large number of other properties will be the scene of exploratory and development work in the West Shiningtree district. After all it is mining work like this that really "booms" a district in a solid way and with permanent results.
