FRIDAY, OCT. 18.

Men who are afraid of their wives are jeered at by men who are afraid of their stenographers. Fear is only relative after all.

Down in New Hampshire there has been found a man who had never heard of Roosevelt. Up in this country there are many people who envy him.

The declaration of war in the Balkans has sent the price of wheat upward and stocks down. The pendulum swings back and forth and all can not be helped at once.

It costs one billion dollars to run the Government called the United States, and there are people who claim they will do it for three hundred million less if given the job.

In the state of Illinois there is now in force what is known as a mother's pension law and in Wisconsin a similar law will be voted upon at the coming election. Its ultimate object is to save the children by keeping mothers and children together.

The crops were so heavy this year in the West that the railroads in answer to the call for 20,000 more men to finish the harvesting had to run another excursion commencing October 14th, a thing that never before has been necessary. The question now is whether the bumper crops will lower the high cost of living, or will it be left for the transportation companies to grab off the extra slice.

Probably the most cold blooded plans to carry out a murder are now being told in New York City in the Becker murder trial. Before going on the stand to testify in this trial Rose made this statement: "I'm going to make good. I know what I'm going up again, but I'm going through with it. I don't care what happens. I have only one regret in going on the stand, I have met and known some decent people and now through me they will be besmirched. I wish that nobody but myself need be dragged into this, but I suppose it is part of the penalty. I shall tell every detail of the most awful plot that was ever hatched."

Do you put dogs and cats above the lives of your children? You know that they breed disease and carry disease and you have the power to stop it. Some contend that dogs are protectors and savers of life, but for every life saved by dogs, there are ten lives forfeited.

Contagious diseases of children would be cut down more than fifty per cent, if cats and dogs were kept from being fondled in your homes and driven from crowded cities.

The child with diphtheria, scarlet fever and diseases of that kind carried from place to place plays with a pet dog or cat. The dog or cat wanders around the neighborhood, comes in contact with other dogs or cats, and the disease is sent into neighboring houses.

Especially in the cities or in crowded tenement houses every official of every health department knows that the cats are carriers of disease, that they cause epidemics.

In almost all cities there is an ordinance to keep chickens, ducks, cows, pigs and almost every other live animal in the country where they belong, and these are relatively harmless in the carrying of disease in comparison to the cats and dogs. To keep these animals where they belong does not seem to be inhuman to our dumb animals, but only a step toward common sense and the saving in many cases of the health and lives of your children.

Fathers and mothers ought to know enough to keep cats and dogs away from children. They ought to accept the statement of scientific men that cats and dogs are responsible, as carriers of disease and developers of disease, for one half of the death of young children and many who are grown up.

In almost every home you will see women and children and men kissing and fondling cats and dogs, in face of the proven fact that they are the greatest of any of the carriers of disease.

It is time for intelligent human beings that protect their children from all kinds of dirt to keep those children from the animals that revel in dirt and that almost constantly carry disease.

What is the best thing in the world for a boy or girl? A mother! Better than the finest orphan's home; better than scientific sanitation; better than smiling attendants to whom each child is a problem merely and a duty. For the child the mother is a soul sacrifice personified, a loving providence of the home all its very own.

What is the greatest thing in the world for a mother—any mother? Her child, of course! It is the dearest part of herself. It saves her from heartbreak when the world looks darkest. Its baby power drags her back from the brink of the river of suicide. And when the hosts of evil drive her to that blacker suicide which lets the flesh live and kills the soul it is her child which saves her.

What then is the greatest thing the state can do for the mothers and children whom misfortune is about to separate? To keep them together, of course, to preserve to the little ones this mother principle of the diet, to save to the mothers this savior principle of the child.

Tariff will save money but this will save human souls. Currency reform will, it is said, prevent financial panics but this will still the ravaging hurricanes of despair which wreck families and strew the coasts of hell with the pitiful widows of the lost, and the castaways. Trust control will perhaps lower the cost of living but this will uplift life itself for thousands of those for whom the man of Galilee deemed it meet to be a husband and a father. This is fitting work for the christian state.

Can such work be done by a state? It is done by the state of Illinois. Can it be done without waste of money? No amount of money so used would be wasted. But as a matter of fact Illinois saves money by this new and splendid beneficence. How does it do this?

By a very simple and sensible plan. This is the plan: To all mothers whose husbands have died or disappeared or are incapable of supporting a family the state pays a little income in money. It pays enough so that the mothers and children can live together under the same roof; so that the fires may be kept burning on the altar of the hearth; so that these intimately dependent on each other in body and spirit may not lose out of their lives the sense of home.

In one week in August, Cook county, in which Chicago is situated, paid out to these poor women ten thousand dollars for home saving. Experts say it would have taken three times this sum to have maintained the same children in orphan asylums. This is the mothers' pension system of Illinois.

Does it appeal to you? Does it not warm your heart with a desire to make it universal?

"I see society people at Newport had a baby show." "Where did they get the babies?" "It was a loan exhibition, I believe."—Washington Herald.

Mining News

Internal dissension which has arisen among the insiders in the Golden Rose Mining Co., Ltd., with head office in North Bay, has resulted in the issuing of a writ against the president, vice-president and secretary-treasurer asking an injunction to prevent them from taking any action regarding the company's affairs until they have been re-elected by the shareholders.

The row has been brought about by charges that the directorate had refrained from sending out a financial statement and from calling an annual meeting, and were consequently acting illegally in carrying on the business of the company after their term of office had expired.

A general meeting of the shareholders was held in the summer of 1911 in Orillia, when it was arranged to hold the next annual meeting in July, 1912. No such assembly was called, hence the present action. The plaintiffs ask for an accounting of the finances and for the calling of the annual meeting according to the bylaws of the company. The annual returns due from the company in March last have not been sent out as yet.

The Golden Rose Mining Co., Ltd., has an authorized capital of $500,000, and was incorporated 1909. The properties are in the Timagami Forest Reserve. The first head office was in Sudbury, but it was later on moved to Orillia, and last year to North Bay. There have been several internal rows among the directors, and on various occasions writs have been issued against the officers.

The defendants in the case are Edward J. Townsend, president; John Annis, vice-president, and Jas. Townsend, secretary-treasurer, J. H. Clary of Sudbury, acting for the shareholders, is the plaintiff.

The Golden Rose property has been known for many years and until Porcupine was discovered was looked upon as being the best prospect for a mine of any in Canada.

HELP ALONG THE LIBRARY FUND

The Amount Asked is Very Modest, and should Be Raised Without Trouble

The teachers and pupils of South Porcupine Public School wish to acknowledge, with thanks the following contributions to the school Library Fund. They would like to put in, at the least, a Hundred Dollar Library. Thus equipped, when the school is enlarged, the people making South Porcupine their home can feel assured of excellent educational advantages for their children. There are others whose names are not on the list yet, who we feel sure are willing to help along the good work. Any further contributions may be given to Aubrey Walsh and Edmund McDonnough, or sent direct to the teachers, and will be acknowledged later.

The next Teachers' Institute of Temiskaming District is to be held in South Porcupine. This will bring teachers, who have taught in all parts of the Province, to our town and they should see that in this Northland the Public School facilities are equal to those of further south.
