permanently unfit class has been expedited.

The increased efficiency throughout the training divisions, the saving of public funds, and the humane treatment of casualties resulting from the adoption of these measures is sufficiently obvious.

EACH SOLDIER COSTS $3,000.

In regard to the question of the saving of public funds, it has been estimated that before a soldier gets to the front he has cost the Canadian Government approximately $3,000. This estimate has been furnished by the pay authorities, and is a low one. It is therefore safe to say that soldiers to the value of over $50,000,000 were being ignored and permitted to become useless through lack of proper organization and handling of casualties.
