The prizes on display in Halperin's window attracted unusual attention before and during the day's events.

WHERE A LITTLE HEADWORK WOULD HAVE HELPED MUCH

One day last week passengers at the smaller stations along the Porcupine branch of the T. & N. O. had a trying and uncomfortable time that could easily have been avoided by intelligent thought and action on the part of the head guys looking after the train service. The train known as No. 54 which connects with the West-bound National was cancelled at Porcupine Junction on account of wrecks due to lateness, or lateness due to wrecks, or something. Passengers at the smaller stations along the line, such as Alexo, Fielding, McIntosh Springs, Drinkwater, Keyson, Hoyle, etc. accordingly were defrauded of the regular service stopping at these smaller points. The Toronto train is scheduled to stop only at Connaught between Porcupine and South End, but it was thought that surely in view of the cancelling of No. 54, and the fact that the Toronto train was running an hour and a half late, or practically on the regular time of the cancelled train stops would be made for passengers at the smaller station. But nothing so good occurred. Instead, No. 47 sailed by the little stations under its own steam and as proudly as if it were on time. The waiting passengers had to keep on waiting for five hours until the late night train came along and stopped to take them on. The fact that in most cases they had no place to wait but in the little station, and that in nearly every case the stations were without fire or other comforts, did not add anything to the good temper of the passengers who had thus been stranded for five hours. "Why couldn't No. 47 stop for once for the convenience of the people?" was a question frequently and angrily asked. "Why couldn't a little intelligence be used in such a matter?" was another question no artist could paint.

THE POOR FISH

The sunfish plays in the water,
The starfish rests in the sand,
The flying fish uses the atmosphere,
And the poor fish walk on land.
