The First Brick Building and the First Auto in the Camp

Timmins has two bank branches with handsome quarters in permanent fire-proof brick buildings. Another bank (The Bank of Montreal) is completing the erection of a three-story brick building of modern type. The fourth of the banks has had large and pleasing accommodation in a good building, which, however, is not of brick or other fire-proof construction. The Timmins branches of the Bank of Commerce, the Dominion Bank, the Bank of Montreal and the Imperial Bank may all be justly proud of their excellent buildings. But it remained nevertheless for a South Porcupine branch to have the distinction of erecting the first brick building in the Camp.

BANK OF TORONTO AT SOUTH END

The picture shows the Camp's first brick structure, and also, in front of the building, the Camp's first automobile. Since those early days the automobiles in the Camp have grown from one to five hundred, and only a reasonable percentage of them are Fords, at that. Practically every good make of car is represented in this Camp. The lone brick building is also lonely no more, the erection of brick and tile structures now being the rule rather than the exception. Jack Dalton owned the lone auto. He has a whole fleet of autos these days, and if he could not buy the bank he could take a pretty good option on it.
