ship, the majority of throughful people will be in agreement. Translated into English this idea is: that a good citizen will obey the laws of the land even when the laws are distasteful. Instead of disregarding the law, the good citizen will strive by all lawful means to have objectionable laws amended or repealed, but that so long as they remain law he will respect them because of his general regard for all law. This is the open attitude taken by The Toronto Globe, though that newspaper carries at the head of its editorial column the quotation from Junius, "The subject who is truly loyal to the chief magistrate will faddists to turn personal tastes, often not advise or SUBMIT to arbitrary measures." But, it is difficult to be enthusiastic on a particular question on the calendar, it is impossible that and consistent at the same time.
