THE NEW IDEA IN INDUSTRY

Many people do not realize that we are living in a new industrial era. You hear much talk about the freedom of the younger generation, expressed by bobbed hair, short skirts, the discard of chaperones, etc., but few realize that this is a huge wave of rebellion at conditions of life that thwart human happiness and the right to live one's own life that is slowly undermining and completely altering many of our institutions.

This is very noticeable in industrial plants. The terrible working conditions portrayed in some of Dicken's books have never been duplicated in Canada. Large employers, with vision, have however, realized the wisdom of creating the best possible working conditions for their employees.

Nowhere is this better exemplified than by the Salada Tea Company. It was the idea of the Hon. P. C. Barkin, the founder of the Company, and now the Canadian High Commissioner in London, to create an atmosphere of order, cleanliness and beauty in his huge warehouses that would react on the workers, make them want to work well, and give them greater satisfaction out of life. His ideal has been admirably accomplished, we were told by one of the officials of the company.

Some of the employees welfare features adopted by the Salada Tea Company are followed by many other firms. Some are unique. The Salada Tea Company, in each of their warehouses, has a large and artistically furnished employees clubroom, and a spotlessly clean and efficient dining room. The community dining room and rest room create a family atmosphere among the workers which makes for better co-operation, contentment and a higher standard of work. All employees can also benefit by an exceedingly cheap group insurance plan.

There are beautiful gardens behind the Toronto plant on King St., near Spadina Ave., where the employees bowl in the summertime, and shower baths are supplied in the basement.

Now that Canada is celebrating her 60th Anniversary as a nation, and since she is rapidly becoming one of the great industrial powers of the world, it is interesting to note that she is also in the forefront in providing ideal working conditions in many of her great industrial enterprises.

Thousands of people every year inspect the "Salada" buildings. They are typical of what is now being done along these lines.
