of the people's own railway-the Temiskaming and North- peals, but strive to carry on their good work with the very ern Ontario Railway-which has just concluded the most minimum of annoyance to the public in the way of calls successful year in its history. This railway is one of the for money. No matter when an appeal is made for the few truly successful railways on the continent. It not only Children's Aid Society work, the public should feel that they is paying its way on profits from operation, but it is also are giving to a worthy cause and give as generously as posgiving the public the best of service and extending its mile- sible. The Children's Aid has done and is doing a great age and its accommodation to meet the needs of this work for better citizenship. It will appeal to most for its expanding and developing new country. The North Land humanitarian features, but the business and the patriotic should be particularly proud of the success of the T. & N. O. sides should not be overlooked. Giving a chance for edubecause the progress of each is so bound up in the other cation and proper homes to children unfortunately placed that it is difficult to prove definitely whether the North by circumstances and conditions is surely good patriotism. Land's advancement is mainly due to the T. & N. O., or the The work is also good business because it tends to make T. & N. O.'s success follows as a natural consequence on the creditable and self-supporting citizens out of boys and girls, development of the North. The North is pleased with the who, without the efforts made by such agencies as the T. & N. O. Railway and the T. & N. O. is so devoted to the Children's Aid, would in all probability be burdens on the North, that neither of them is likely to stop to argue out community, if not menaces to society. Of the children hanthe matter. It might be well, however, to put on record dled by the Children's Aid in the province of Ontario not again the very general feeling in this North that the T. & one per cent turn out badly. The chances are that with-N. O. is doing its part in the building up of this country, out the C.A.S. effort there would be little hope for more and giving excellent service. The commission and the staffs than a small percentage of these unfortunate children turnand the Government that backs them up are all entitled to ing out well. The plan of the C.A.S. is briefly to have every full credit.

Deer is very plentiful this year in the area from Kenny to near North Bay. This is pleasing news, but the accompanying report—that the wolves are more numerous than the deer-is not so pleasing. The wolves are slaughtering the deer and it would seem that both can not live in this North Land. The wolves vary their activities by occasionally stopping the slaughter of the deer to kill sheep on the farms in the district. A week or so ago a farmer near ren's Aid in this district. Next week a thorough canvass for Powassan lost several sheep through the depredations of the wolves. Other similar losses are reported from the district where game now abounds. There seems to be a very debtedness on the Shelter account and the providing of the general feeling that methods are urgently needed to destroy necessary funds for carrying on the work for the ensuing the wolves. Many feel that the Government made a mistake in reducing the bounty on wolves and that the bounty should be materially increased so that it would be worth while for many to make a regular business of slaughtering the wolves. The wolves are making a regular business of of the amount noted. Groups of ladies in the town and slaughtering deer. The deer are worth more than the wolves and the extra money required for adequate bounty payments.

Standards of living are constantly changing. And there are also different standards among different people. The new maid said to the lady of the house:-"I guess you people aren't very well off, are ye?" As the lady of the house did not feel there were any evidences of poverty about the place, and happily knew of no reason why there should be, in wonderment she asked the maid what prompted her to think that there was any lack of money. "Well, you ain't got either a piano or a radio," replied the maid. For a minute the lady could find no words for reply. Then she asked the maid if her own home possessed either radio or piano. "Oh, sure," said the maid, "we have both!"

A buyer of cattle who was travelling on the train the other day made the rather startling statement that cattle purchase by the canning companies are not inspected to assure freedom from disease. Cattle purchased by the buyers are graded, the lowest grade being what is termed "canners." These "canners" are utilized for the making of new and striking and would give the touch of pleasant oricanned meats. All sorts of regulations and restrictions apply in regard to the condition of the cattle to be sold in the ordinary way for meat, but according to the cattle buyer anything will do for a "canner." If this is the fact the law should be amended to protect the public health. It may be quite true that the canning concerns may themselves guard against improper meat being used, but there is always the possibility that one or two concerns will not be careful enough. The law should be such that no concern can prejudice the public health by the utilization of improper meat. If everything is all right at present, the canners need not object to Government inspection that will assure only sound and healthy animals being utilized.

A young English scientist, a professor in one of the Old Country colleges, makes the claim that he has discovered a principle whereby he can overcome gravity. Prof. Leacock, of McGill University, Montreal, long ago developed a force whereby gravity was overcome at the will of the Canadian professor.

By the inauguration of the correspondence course plan and the travelling schools, Premier Ferguson assured to all boys and girls in this province a chance for education. Previous to the adoption of these plans the children of settlers in sparsely-settled areas did not enjoy this opportunity. There were many cases where the settlers were not able to build and maintain new schools in convenient locations, and existing schools were too distant. To-day over six hundred pupils are taking the correspondence courses and probably as many more benefitting from the travelling school cars. That means that a thousand or more children, at least, have a chance for education who would otherwise have been debarred by circumstances from this great benefit. If Premier Ferguson had conferred no other blessing on this country than this effective interest in the education of all he would be worthy of the most grateful appreciation by this province. And it should be noted that the prompt manner in which he worked out the plans when the need was presented to him made the gift to the youngsters of the province of double value. The same prompt interest is being given by the Premier to the need of the farmers and settlers of this North Land at the present moment, and The Advance believes that effective and speedy action will follow. There is a feeling of confidence that the Premier will find a way, and not waste much time finding it. Mr. A. F. Kenning, M.P.P., recently interviewed Hon. Mr. Ferguson and explained to him the serious situation in which many farmers and settlers in this North now find themselves. On account of the unusual amount of rain they had been unable to save their crops and this to many was a vital matter. It meant in some cases facing actual starvation unless relief came. It meant to many leaving poison within their reach. It is much to be reothers the necessity for deserting their holdings and thus losing the strenuous labour of years. The settlers were not asking for charity, but they would welcome some form of temporary assistance. Mr. Kenning believed that the need could be met by the extension of winter work on the roads. It is to be regretted that some of these poisoners can not This would give the settlers paying work that would tide them over for the year. Incidentally it would mean great benefit to the country at large, because the big need here is for roads and more roads. In succeeding years the improved roads and the new roads would mean additional advantage to the settlers. Mr. Kenning developed an excellent outline of a plan that appears to promise great advantage Cenerally. The Premier was very sympathetic and is taking the matter up, and the general opinion will be that there will be prompt and effective action that will give the settlers a fair chance to continue their pioneering work and make good.

At the present time there appears to be a number of appeals to the public for funds to maintain good causes. It may be regrettable that several such appeals should follow GRAVEL AND SAND-AND PLACER in close succession, but the public may well consider first of all the worthiness of each cause and then the fact that The people of all Ontario should be proud of the success the particular causes referred to do not make frequent apchild in a good hime. If there is a case where a child's CENTURY GOLD WINIG parents realize their duty and improve the home conditions to give the youngster a fair chance. If the home can not be thus improved, another better home is found for the child. The general effect of this plan is to benefit the community as well as the particular youngsters coming to the attention of the Children's Aid. Elsewhere in this issue will be found further references to the work of the Childmembership is to be made throughout the district with a view to raising funds for the paying off of the $1750.00 inyear, so that no more appeals may be necessary for twelve months or more. It is now about eighteen months since the last public appeal was made, though in the meantime a new Shelter has been built, and paid for, with the exception district are generously giving their time and ability to the work of making the canvass. These canvassers should be given kindly welcome by each one called upon, and donations should be made as generous as possible. All the causes appealing at this time for public support are worthy ones, but the Children's Aid, by virtue of the work attempted and the good accomplished, merits special consideration.

> In this issue a gentleman advertises for the return of a gate lost, strayed or stolen on Hallowe'en. This gentleman has hunted high and low for that gate, but can find no trace or track of it. Now that Hallowe'en is over he feels that he needs his gate and is entitled to his gate. He would like the party or parties playing the Hallowe'en prank to return that gate, or at least give him some clue as to where he should look for it. Most people will agree with the fairness of this. The prank-players have had their sport and now the owner wants his gate. The stealing of gates is an old be-whiskered Hallowe'en trick. It has been played so often as to be too common for words. It would be an original thing, however, if the gate-stealers would return that gate in response to the appeal. That would be something ginality to the performance. When the gate-owner suggests that the gate was stolen by young boys, The Advance is not so sure he is on fair ground. He admits he did not see the gate-taking and did not discover any boys about his lot on Hallowe'en. He saw a number of lads on street about eleven o'clock, he says, but this is contrary to the experience of other observers. One man about town commented this week to The Advance on the fact that after the Community Hallowe'en event all the boys and girls went home. There were few tricks played, and those few were by older fellows, and even these older prank-players were handicapped by the fact that they felt that anything they did could not be blamed on the children because the children were not running around town this Hallowe'en. The Community Hallowe'en event was a very complete and gratifying success. Perfection in the matter will about have been reached if the gentleman responsible for the loss of that gate will see at once to its return to its bereaved owner, who, naturally feels that to get anywhere this winter he will need a gate.

> Some people are complaining because the new liquor permits require that applicants for this precious little booklet. tell where they are employed, if any. Why should any man hesitate to give such information in such a case? It is true that it is an embarrassing question for many men who particularly desire permits but would have difficulty, or worse, in expressing on paper their real employment. No doubt it is to check up on just such people that the information referred to is desired. There was a police officer here some years ago who used to fill out the arrest forms with facts that did not evade the issue. Often, for example, the line asking for "occupation" would be filled in by the word, "blindpigger," "tin horn gambler," and so on. These words in each case told the truth. No other true reply could be made. The information was only for the eyes of the police, so no complaint was ever made in the matter. Some of the objectors to the requirements of the liquor permit application may find that "occupation" is a difficult thing for them to describe truthfully and politely at the same time. The clause, however, is an excellent one from the standpoint of the law. The liquor board should not only insist that "occupation" be stated, but they should check up on it and see that it is truthfully told.

N.B.—The murderer of Inspector Constable, of Cochrane, has not yet been brought to justice.

Last week Mr. D. Barrette had the ill-luck to lose two worth of electricity will perform any POSITION WANTED-English-speakparticularly fine dogs. They were good sleigh dogs and big one of the following tasks, according good-humoured gentlemanly fellows. They died by the poison route, some unsportsmanlike individual either deliberately poisoning these valuable dogs, or else carelessly gretted that affairs like this should happen. The poisoning of dogs is a particularly mean form of crime. It has all the attributes of theft with the added meanness of ill-using good animals. Also, it is usually done in cowardly fashion. be caught and properly punished.

SYNDICATE IN WHITNEY

Extended Plans for Development of Very Promising Property in Whitney Township

A new syndicate was recently formed to develop three promising claims in Whitney township about four miles from Porcupine station. The stakers and owners of these mining claims are James McCann, a well-known and experienced prospector of the district, Norman Bayers, a competent mining man and prospector, and Chas. Staaf, well-known in the North as an experienced mining man with 35 years of actual active mining experience. The syndicate formed is to be known as the Century Gold Mining Syndicate. The board of managers includes Chas. Staaf, chairman; Norman Bayers. Timmins; Chas. McCann, secretary-treasurer, Timmins; Raymond Lundstrom, Chicago, Ill.; and J. W. Aikens, Windsor, Ont. The capital is 4,000 units of par value of $50.00 each. While the syndicate is not soliciting for the sale of units, it may be that units may be available for any desiring to purchase. Reports on the property as given in the prospectus just issued, show the property is easy of access. An ample supply of water is available from the Goose River on the property and power from the local power line. About 1,-500 lineal feet of trenching has been done, this being about 2 feet 6 inches wide. Ten tests pits are down to a depth of six feet. Tools are on the property to carry on work on a small scale, and there is a log cabin to accommodate ten men. About $8,000.00 has been spent on the property to date. Mining Engineers Wesley Williams and David M. Thomson have given very favourable reports on the property. Mr. Williams, in referring to the main ore deposit on the property says that "commercial gold will likely come in at a very shallow depth, as the galena silver ore is nothing but an indicator of gold values when no limestone is adjacent." Mr. Thomson reports favourably on the property.

The syndicate believes that the property has immense possibilities, and they are putting in their own money to back this belief. They think they have the geological conditions that are essential to have on a gold property in this mining district. "The facts warrant the statement that there is no known condition opposed to the probability of bringing in a paying mine here," is one way they express it.

The head office of the syndicate is at Timmins, and the plans include the idea of development work on an extended

ENSIGN BOND WILL BE STATIONED AT TORONTO

This week Ensign and Mrs. John Bond received word from Salvation Army headquarters that their new charge wil be Rhodes Avenue corps, Toronto. This new charge for Ensign Bond is in the East Toronto division and is a promotion that all here will be pleased to note, though greatly regretting the necessity for the departure of Ensign and Mrs. Bond from Timmins where they have accomplished so much good. The new officers for the Timmins branch of the Army have not yet been announced.
