The Sudbury Star accuses The Advance of being "afflicted with a Scottish sense of humour." It is not an affliction; Harry Lauder tells of the man staggering home one night in an advanced state of intoxication. His good wife rebuked him. "This drinking business is becoming a habit with you, Jock!" she said. "Ye're wrang there, woman," he replied, "It's no' a habit,-it's a gift!"

. . . .

Hon. G. N. Gordon, of Peterborough, Ontario, is accused of believing in Veniotism, which is the synonym for extreme partyism and the idea that political positions should be the reward not of merit or suitability, but of slavish partizanship. Why should the gentleman not believe in Veniotism? How else could he have become a Senator? With kindest regards, yours affectionately, "A One-Horse Weekly."

When integrity and ability are combined in high degree, as in Mr. Longmore's case, the town that enjoys such services is fortunate, indeed, and the loss of such services is to be greatly regretted. It is only fair to say that Mr. Longmore has done his share and is entitled to follow his desire to by the town in securing such whole-hearted and able serby another man who has given long and faithful service to formed. the municipality. But it is well for the people to express appreciation for outstanding service in their interests. The town of Timmins owes much to the long line of able men who have served the town in its municipal government in the years that are

Hardly a day passes but some one rises up to suggest that he or she knows how to run a newspaper better than the men who try to learn the game in actual practice. The critics of the newspapers are so many that not too much attention is paid to them. Occasionally, the critics start a newspaper of their own, and then newspapermen have the last laugh. Once the critics are actually in the newspaper game they, in turn, have to endure the common criticism GRAVEL AND SAND-AND PLACER piled on all who run newspapers, while they lack the fortitude and hardihood that long experience in newspaper work gives to its victims to support their souls. Because of all this, newspermen in general do not take too seriously the idea of so many that they could beat newspapermen at their own game. The Advance has gone on advancing, unruffled which never before nor since it has and unalarmed, during the many occasions when somebody or other was going to show this newspaper how a real newspaper should be conducted. But at last The Advance is genuinely perturbed. "Lap" Laprairie announces that he is going to issue for a week or two a newspaper that will make them all sit up and take notice-and nourishment. The man who could make two whiskers grow where only one grew before is a man to be feared. "Lap" has built up the greatest Charity Turkey Stag known. THE FAME OF A BLUENOSE

(Halifax Chronicle)

A movement is on foot in Boston to erect a monument to Donald McKay the builder of the famous line of packet and clipper ships, which, as the Boston Herald says, brought "America's maritime glory to its finest flower," and gave to the merchant marine of the United States a fame held. This Nova Scotian whose genius wrote one of the proudest chapters in the story of the sailing ship literally revolutionized the era of sail. Leaving his home in Shelburne as a youth scarcely out of his teens, and after an apprenticeship in New York and a short time at Newburyport, Mass. where he built in partnership his first in vessels, he established the shipyard of whose feats in speed and earning power rang around the world.

"Why is it so hard to find an English boxing champion now?" I asked. "In the olden days there were boxing rooms all over Londan," he went on, "so that lads got more practice. They do not exist to-day. I remember the times when men had a spar and then threw their caps into the ring for 'nobbings,' that was pennies.
