Housewives are Asked to Sell Their Recipes

One hundred recipes are required for a new Recipe Book which is going to be published by one of Canada's oldest manufacturers of Pure Food Products. The recipes required are those of simple, tasty and inexpensive dishes such as are used in the average Canadian home. To get one hundred of these Recipes, the firm in question is willing to pay five dollars each for the best fifty, and three dollars each for the next best fifty recipes sent in by housewives.

There is only one condition to be complied with. Recipes must employ among their ingredients one or more of the company's products. However, this condition presents no difficulties, for all the commodities manufactured by the company are used in general cooking, pastry making, bread baking, salads and candy. Recipes for any one of these are eligible. Arrangements have been made to have the recipes tested by expert Canadian dieticians.

That our readers may have an opportunity to obtain cash for their recipes, we give the firm's name and address: The Canada Starch Company, Limited, Montreal, P. Q.

Interview Denied With Toronto Daily Paper

The Sudbury Star on Saturday last said:—

"Stories published by a Toronto evening newspaper to the effect that 200 families in Espanola are in destitute circumstances as the result of the curtailment of production at the Abitibi Power and Paper Company's plant there, were denied by General Superintendent C. M. Belden in conversation with The Sudbury Star yesterday. Mr. Belden states that not more than 90 men are unemployed in Espanola at the present time and that even among them there are no apparent signs of serious distress, the Community Chest Fund, established some years, being fairly adequate to care for the families."

"The Toronto newspaper described conditions in Espanola as deplorable and with little hope of betterment. An alleged interview with Mr. Belden reports him as saying: "We have been using only one machine since the middle of January. About 500 men are out of work and I suppose it is pretty hard on them as there is no other work here for them to do. But there is nothing we can do here. We are only working under instructions from the Montreal office."

"To The Sudbury Star, Mr. Belden denied having issued any such statement, claiming that all he said was that only one machine was operating. Questioned as to the actual number of men out of employment at the present, Mr. Belden estimated it at less than 100. "We are only operating one machine, but it is running double shift, thereby giving two complete crew men part time work," stated Mr. Belden.

"Questioned regarding the reported petition forwarded to Hon. George Howard Ferguson, by the unemployed papermakers, regarding the immediate return of production to normal, Mr. Belden stated that he had not heard of it. The majority of the men who were thrown out of work when production was curtailed early in January have been absorbed by the Iroquois Falls mill, according to the superintendent."

JUDGMENT RESERVED IN AUTOMOBILE DAMAGE CASE

Judge Hayward has reserved decision in the action brought at Division Court at Halleybury recently, arising out of an automobile collision near the La Rose bridge at Cobalt. Charles Shilson, Silver Centre, sued Con Schraeder, Cobalt, for $33, damage done to his car in the mishap, and Schraeder counter-claimed for $110. Each blamed the other for responsibility for the collision.

WOMAN NEAR LATCHFORD ASKS FOR BOUNTY ON WOLF

North Bay Nugget: A very fine wolf pelt was brought to Halleybury recently by Mrs. C. Kreiwisman, who resides about five miles distant from Latchford. She brought the pelt to Halleybury for the purpose of making application for the wolf bounty of $15. The animal was shot by Mrs. Kreiwisman herself. She had set out traps for the purpose of catching wolves and on visiting her trap found the wolf to be securely held but very much alive. As she came close to its head to shoot the animal, it reared up and gave a loud call, but at that instant she was successful in shooting it through the head. It was killed near Bass Lake, in the Temagami Forest Reserve, in the Township of Bridgestock. The pelt was in fine condition and measured seven feet from tip to tip and was of the timber wolf class.

CONDITIONS AMONG THE INDIANS IN THE FAR NORTH

Indians Said to be Very Fond of Staying Out in the Rain, Even When They are Ill, Says Ottawa Note

References made to the conditions obtaining among the Indians in their far north have been frequent in The Advance recently, the question being brought up by the statements made by Capt. Maxwell on his return from Moose Factory where he saw much suffering and sickness among the Indians. The answer of the Ottawa department under whose care the Indians are supposed to be is to the effect that the Indians are visited once a year and that they were all right last year and will likely be all right next year, so what more can be done? The people of Canada have more interest in the matter than that,—more interest apparently than the Ottawa department. A despatch from Ottawa last week should be of interest. It reads as follows:—

For most of Canada this has been a very pleasant winter—not excessively cold, no very bad storms, more employment than in former years. However, with many of the Indian population, numbering 105,000, the season has not dealt quite so kindly. Much sickness among the red men inhabitants of the north is reported, and tidings coming through one isolated band after another cause anxiety to the officials of the Department of Indian Affairs who do their utmost to make the lives of these wards of the government as happy as possible.

The latest reports have come from the posts along the shores of James Bay where sickness is causing much trouble. Hunting and fishing were the occupations of the red men when Jacques Cartier sailed up the St. Lawrence and they see no reason why they should not follow these callings in the present generations. They have certain districts where their ancestors hunted and there is an urge to go to these same localities, often a hundred or more miles from any white settlement or medical assistance.

The Indians with their wives and children fare forth to these isolated parts with little or no provisions, confident of living off the country as they go along. The women snare rabbits and the men trap and hunt larger game. Things go not too badly until some of the family fall sick. Often it is the head of the family and if game is none too plentiful, hunger soon faces them.

The influenza epidemic which spread over a considerable portion of Canada and United States this winter also reached up among the Indians of the north. Many have died and on some occasions word of their plight reached civilization only because of the extensive winter flying that is being carried out in connection with the exploration and prospecting activities of mining companies. Numbers of Indians suffer from tuberculosis and they fall an easy prey to influenza and accompanying diseases.

The department of course cannot supply doctors for every band of Indians. It "caches" hundreds of dollars worth of medical supplies with the various missionaries working among them. It instructs any Hudson Bay factor to issue supplies to Indians in want, and charge it to the Dominion government. Dr. E. L. Stone is the medical superintendent and he keeps in touch with the outposts of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police who wireless appeals should Indians be found in want. Every effort is made to meet the need of the situation and the airplane is a very present help to the red men.

Nearly all the Indians in those northern parts are "treaty Indians." The British government took the position that no land was to be taken away from these aboriginal inhabitants except through treaty and the Canadian government carries this out. When Ontario took a large tract of land around James Bay, it did so by treaty with the Indians which the Federal government arranges. The terms provide that a reserve equal to 640 acres for every five souls be set aside in the territory and that every Indian, male or female, gets $4 a year as long as "grass grows or water flows."

One hundred and twenty-eight thousand square miles in Ontario near the Manitoba boundary remain which Indians have not ceded over by treaty and accordingly receive no treaty money. Department officials plan visiting the natives there during the summer to arrange a treaty and plan a reserve.

In the section around James Bay from whence reports have come that many Indians are sick, there are about 1600. "When I was there last summer," said one of the officials who paid the treaty money, "the Indians were fairly healthy. As soon as the department officials arrive however, these natives hurry to the post to be doctored. They are lectured on how to avoid the spread of tuberculosis and protect their children from it, but I am afraid they pay very little attention to what we say."

"The Indians are passionately fond of being out in the rain and it is impossible to keep even those suffering from tuberculosis from going out and getting drenched. They kept coming to us for medicine. You are not sick I told one of them. 'I know' he replied not sick now but want some medicine so not be sick after you go away."

In the old times they didn't "make" whoopee; they "raised" it. And they didn't call it whoopee—Detroit News.
