TEACHERS URGED TO HELP BUILD LOYAL CANADIANS

Eloquent and Impressive Address to Cochrane Teachers' Institute by Rev. Fr. Lamoureux, of the Normal School, Ottawa

In his report of the District of Cochrane Teachers' Institute convention held at Kapuskasing last week, and to which reference is made elsewhere, Mr. J. B. Roberts gives the following review of the address on "Educating for Citizenship," by Rev. Fr. Lamoureux, of the Normal School, University of Ottawa:—

Dealing with this topic, Rev. Fr. Lamoureux, focussed the thoughts of his audience upon the requirements of a good citizen and how teachers may so apply their influence that these qualities will be produced in their pupils.

A good citizen of any land must feel a love and a loyalty for his country, for his city his town, his birthplace and for his home, as well as experiencing the spirit of his country permeating his very being. Each inhabitant must feel a personal duty toward the welfare of his nation, a duty that commands him to live honestly that his influence will be beneficial rather than detrimental to his community. Only with such realization of responsibility will the vast potentialities of Canada ever materialize.

Material things do not however make up a country. A country has also a deep spiritual consciousness which is comprised of the virtues of those who have preceded. A true Canadian must have a truly Canadian atmosphere surrounding him. Canadian children, surrounded as they are by literature whose spirit is not our own, by plays and by songs which are surcharged with the American spirit, are in danger of accepting the American spirit and discarding our own, and letting it fall into decay.

Rev. Fr. Lamoureux now directed the thoughts of the assembly along paths of remedy.

Boys and girls are always attracted to things of power and greatness and Canada does not lack in magnitude of resources, of extent or of possibilities for future growth. Teachers must inculcate the spirit of patriotism by teaching love and adoration for Canada's material riches through lessons in geography. Too much cannot be made of this country's great wealth in minerals, forests, soil and majestic scenery, for, when children realize these about their own home land, greatly elevated is it in their estimation. The truly Canadian spirit must be instilled through Canadian history, Canadian literature and songs, through Canadian plays and Canadian art. As cutting the roots of a plant will prove destructive to it, so the severing of the contact will lead to the downfall of that nation.

In Canada there are many factors tending to lead to causes of disruption and to these the speaker skillfully directed attention.

This country, in its far extending areas, embraces people whose interests are greatly diversified, whose manners whose customs, whose language and race cause differences in opinion; but, just so great as the diversification of these interests must the spirit of a true Canadian citizen be, to include the interests of the nine provinces of our dominion. To promote harmony among the numerous classes of people, each class must be taught what the others have done in building Canada. This is especially true in regard to the English and the French, the two races which formed the foundation of our land. The French child must be taught what the English have given toward our Dominion and the English must learn and appreciate what the French, in their turn, have achieved for the betterment of the same land. Surely a realization of a common love, a common endeavour, will bring harmony between these two peoples.

From the early days of Jacques Cartier, Canada's laws have been in the making and the laws of a country are only for the protection of its subjects. Sometimes these laws are made to protect a man from himself.

In the classroom the seed of obedience to law germinates in the child and this must be fostered to form in the pupil a definite sense of duty. Children should be encouraged in the perseverance of a task which they think tedious, not because they expect some form of punishment if they give up, but because it is their duty to themselves, and to their country and to the world that they do their very best.

A true citizen holds his country in high esteem, glories in her material and spiritual wealth, encourages and employs himself for the uplifting of his fellowmen. Here, in Canada, with honest, earnest co-operation of all Canadians, what could we not accomplish?

BROTHER CERTAIN PARTY OF FLIERS ARE ALL RIGHT

Norman Pearce Confident That Only a Question of Time Until the McAlpine Party is Safe

As noted before in these columns, there is special interest in regard to the search being made for Col. McAlpine and his party travelling by airplane who have been lost in the far north for several weeks. As mentioned before several of the party, including Richard Pearce of The Northern Miner, are Northern men, and are especially well-known through this part of the country. Col. McAlpine is also well known here and with an election in progress there will be particular remembrance of him as the last time he was in Timmins it was in connection with an election campaign. That was in 1925 and Col. McAlpine came to Timmins to take charge of the campaign for Ray O'Neill. Just how well Col. McAlpine did his work here may be judged by the good majority won by the candidate in whose behalf Col. McAlpine worked.

To return to the fliers who are lost in the far north, there was an article in The Toronto Mail and Empire this week that should prove of general interest to readers. The Mail and Empire says:—

"There is no reason for anything but hopefulness for Col. C. D. H. McAlpine and his seven companions, in the opinion of Norman Pearce, editor of The Northern Miner and brother of Richard Pearce, one of the party who have been missing nearly five weeks in the northwest barrens.

"I honestly haven't any doubt that they'll all be found safe," the missing man's brother told The Mail and Empire when he arrived in the city on Saturday morning from Winnipeg, headquarters of the huge search organization which is preparing to send a fleet of airplanes sweeping over the north country as soon as the winter freeze-up gives the signal to start.

"Mr. Pearce knows the north country, knows the men of the missing party, and knows, too, the men who are conducting the search. As a result he finds it impossible to be anything but confident.

"And it is mostly on the missing men themselves that he bases his confidence. 'The big thing I bank on,' he said, 'is that they're all capable, resourceful, self-reliant men. The pilots know their jobs, and so do all the rest. I know how those men handle themselves.'

"Mr. Pearce had a demonstration of their calibre a year ago when he experienced a forced landing in the north country with Col. McAlpine, McMillan and Major Rogers, the two pilots, and Milne, the mechanic. 'We landed in a blizzard and we were tied up till it lifted,' he said. 'But those fellows took it all as a matter of course and just made themselves comfortable until we could get away.'

"But wherever they are, they're probably stuck until the freeze-up," he said. "They might have landed on water and been frozen in, but still they wouldn't be able to walk out until the rivers were frozen."

"The freeze-up should be general, given normal weather, within the next 10 days," he said.

"And you can't say too much for the fellows who have been flying in the meantime," he added. "The planes have been doing the most daring work that has been done since the war, in flying over partly frozen country with pontoons. If the engine misses, there's only one answer; it's possible to take off from ice on pontoons, but landing on them can't be done. It means a crash."

But when the freeze-up comes, they'll just sweep that country. The planes will probably fly abreast, about two miles apart, and cover it mile by mile.

"The small lakes are frozen now, and ice is making already around the edges of the larger lakes. The pilots won't wait till the big lakes are completely frozen over—they'll get off on their skis just as soon as they have enough ice for good take-off and landing surfaces."

"The question of expense, he pointed out when asked to estimate how much the search had cost thus far, doesn't enter into the considerations of the men who are in charge of organization.

"He admitted that $200,000 might have been spent already, but remarked: "That isn't the way these men are looking at it. They're going to find the party and that is all there is to it. You can see that they are not worrying about money when the Lindsley group alone sent a special train in to Churchill with sets of skis, and chartered a steamer at Chesterfield Inlet and small boats at Baker Lake and Bathurst Inlet."

CONGREGATION DELIGHTED WITH PREACHER ON SUNDAY

Rev. Mr. Miller, of Matheson, was the preacher at both services at the United Church here on Sunday. There were good congregations out to hear him, the evening attendance being particularly large. The sermons by Rev. Mr. Miller were especially able and effective and the congregations were delighted with his earnest and inspiring addresses. Among the several ministers recently preaching for a call at the United Church here, Rev. Mr. Miller made the most favourable impression, and he won wide circles of friends by his talent, earnestness and eloquence.

Popular Young Couple Wedded Here This Morning

A quiet but pretty wedding took place this (Thursday) morning, Oct. 17th, at the St. Anthony's church, when Miss Marie Jeanne Larcher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Larcher, Sixth avenue, and Mr. David O'Neil Larcher, of town, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. Rev. Father Gelina officiated at the ceremony. After the wedding the young couple left on the early morning train for Donegona, Sudbury and North Bay to visit relatives and friends. On their return early next month the young couple will reside in Timmins where hosts of friends will extend sincerest good wishes.

The groom is a popular member of the mine staff of the Hollinger, while the bride, who has been on the staffs of the Pierce, Hollinger, Dominion and Pioneer stores, has hosts of friends in town. Her talent as a pianist and her ability to make friends have made her very popular. The regard in which the young couple are held was evidenced by the large number of valuable and handsome presents received by them.

Visitor to Timmins Has Some Interesting Coins

Mr. Hastings, who is visiting Timmins at present on a trip to Canada from his home in England, last week showed The Advance a number of interesting old and rare coins in his possession. Mr. Hastings had noted the references in The Advance to old and rare coins in the possession of Timmins people and he was much interested in these, being himself a collector of odd coins and curios.

One of the oldest coins in Mr. Hastings' collection is a monster copper penny of the reign of George III, dated 1797. It is twice as big every way as the ordinary penny of to-day, but only about half the size of another coin—a two-penny piece, also dated 1797, and issued in the reign of George III—which Mr. Hastings has in his collection. If a man got a couple of dollars' worth of change in these two-penny copper coins he would need a draw to take it away.

A still older piece held by Mr. Hastings is a Queen Anne English 3-shilling piece, dated 1707. This is a rare old coin indeed. A half-crown of George III's reign, and a shilling piece issued under the same monarch are also coins that are particularly rare to-day. Mr. Hastings also specially values a 5-shilling piece that he holds, as this is very seldom encountered even in good coin collections these days. This coin was issued in the time of George III. Mr. Hastings has a 5-shilling piece, dated 1845, and bearing the profile of Queen Victoria. This is also a rare coin now.

Mr. Hastings has quite a collection of French coins. These include a 50 cent piece of 1866 with the Napoleon profile stamped upon it. There is also a 5-franc piece dated 1871, as well as 5-franc piece issued in 1843 under Louis Philippe.

One of the coins which Mr. Hastings values most is a model half-sovereign issued to commemorate the birth of the Prince of Wales. Another older coin valued highly by Mr. Hastings is the model sovereign dated 1837 and issued to commemorate the accession of Queen Victoria.
