Ontario Seeking Ways to Use Its Iron Ores

In an editorial article dealing with the announcement that a new process had been discovered that would permit the utilization of the low-grade iron ore deposits of Ontario, The Toronto Mail and Empire says:—

"The announcement that group of Canadian business men has acquired the right to introduce into Canada a new method of manufacturing iron and steel from the low-grade iron ores and that the method, known as the Musso semi-direct steel process, is to be tested in the laboratories of the National Research Institute in Ottawa, is of interest to Ontario. This province possesses in its northwestern districts extensive deposits of iron ore, a number of which are in localities comparatively easy of access. Unfortunately the ore is for the most part of low grade. It requires special treatment or "beneficiation" to make it suitable for use in the manufacture of iron and steel. For that reason, and because high-grade ore from mines in the United States has been obtainable for Ontario iron and steel plants, the iron deposits of this province have remained to a large extent unexploited. While that is so, it has been recognized that if economical methods of utilizing Ontario ore could be devised, they would be advantageous to the iron and steel industry and to the province at large. Furthermore, they would be a means of protecting the Ontario iron and steel industry from the consequences of curtailment of its supplies of raw material from the United States. Of the possibility of such a curtailment the Ontario Iron Ore Commission, appointed some years ago, spoke in its report. With that possibility in mind, the commission urged that efforts be made to provide domestic sources of ore supplies for the iron and steel industry in Ontario.

"The Ontario Government has given evidence of its desire to help to provide such supplies. It proposed several years ago to co-operate with the Dominion Government in the payment of bounties on iron ores mined in Ontario and delivered to beneficiating plants or blast furnaces. Failing to secure the consent of the Dominion Government to this plan, the Ontario Government now contemplates the introduction of legislation providing for the payment of a purely provincial subsidy. The new Ontario research foundation and research workers in the laboratories of the Dominion department of mines, it has been announced, are undertaking investigations of the problem of smelting low-grade iron ores. Mr. Edward Turnbull has been carrying on experiments in Ontario with a method of electrical smelting of Ontario ores and now the Musso semi-direct steel process is to be tested. Success of the efforts of the Ontario Government, of experts and of business men to find means of utilizing Ontario ores would be very beneficial to this province. It would lead to the establishment of a labour employing iron mining industry, would free the Ontario iron and steel industry from dependence on foreign sources of supplies of ore and would keep in Canada money now spent elsewhere in the purchase of iron ore."

About $1300 Realized From Bazaar Last Week

The bazaar and turkey dinner under the auspices of the Ladies of the Altar Society of the Church of the Nativity was a great success last week, and those in charge of the arrangements deserve the highest credit for the way the event was carried through. Brief reference was made in The Advance last week to this bazaar and some further notes on the event are given herewith. Everyone attending, and there were large crowds at all sessions on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday last, were delighted with the bazaar and its various pleasing features.

A total of about $1300.00 was realized from the event, which was thus successful financially as it was otherwise. About four hundred persons enjoyed the fine dinner on Thursday evening the ladies are being specially complimented on this feature of the bazaar.

The winners of the various prizes were:—

Father O'Gorman's photo, won by Mrs. Flendel.

Hand painting, won by Mrs. Prout. The decorated cake was won by Mrs. McCann.

The Pick-a-Pocket prize, a hand-painted cushion, was won by W. J. McCoy.

The ladies ask The Advance to thank all who assisted in any way in making the bazaar the success it undoubtedly was.
