New Strike in Alaska the Richest in Years

A despatch from Seattle this week says:—News from Alaska indicates that the gold strike in the Poorman Creek section is one of the richest in years in that territory. The district is near Ruby, half way between Fairbanks and Nome.

In the dead of winter, with temperatures ranging from 30 to 60 degrees below zero, prospectors are musing—and flying—to the scene, to stake claims along the creeks where placer dirt is panning from $3 to $30 a cubic foot in gold.

Thus far the stampede to the new field has been solely from interior Alaska points. The weather has been the chief factor in deterring impulsive souls with a love of adventure. Besides, the Alaskans have had the jump on outsiders. Also adventurers in the United States have learned to take with reserve stories of rich strikes in the far north in areas hard to reach and accessible only at the expense of considerable time and money.

The new find is in an area often explored by prospectors who know how to hunt gold. They had found it in small quantity, but the pay dirt was not attractive enough to warrant real working.

Frank Dorbrandt, veteran Alaska commercial flier, was pressed into service to carry a load of prospectors into the district from Fairbanks. As soon as he landed and discharged his passengers he returned to get a second load.

GOLD EAGLE CAUGHT IN TRAP AT ALGONQUIN PARK

A golden eagle, one of the twelve known to ornithologists on this continent, was caught alive in a wolf trap in Algonquin Park by Joe Lavallée, forest ranger.

The splendid specimen is reported to be 25 pounds in weight and to have a wing spread of over six feet. The bird is to be presented to the Toronto zoo having been accepted today by the city parks department, following an offer made by Walter Cain, deputy minister of lands and forests, to whom the capture was reported by wire.

GIVEN SENTENCE OF SEVEN YEARS FOR USING KNIFE

John Korick Slashed Face and Arms of Fellow-Countryman, Gun and Knife Used in Brutal Assault Case. Swift Punishment for Offender.

At South Porcupine police court on Thursday last, John Korick, a Yugoslav, who has lived at Schumacher for some four or five years, was sentenced by Magistrate Atkinson to seven years in Kingston penitentiary for the brutal slashing of the face of Martin Oreck, a fellow-countryman, who was cut about the face and arms with a knife.

Korick refused to have a solicitor and he put up practically no defence of any sort. He did not apparently even have an excuse of explanation, further than the admission that he had been drinking. So far as could be gathered from his few remarks to the court, he and Oreck had been living in a shack at Schumacher and he objected to Oreck having used a drinking cup to hold some axle grease. According to Oreck's story Korick held a gun right to his mouth and threatened to shoot him if he moved. While he had Oreck thus held motionless with fear, Korick used a knife to slash Oreck's face, there being literally scores of cuts. Over forty stitches were required to sew up the wounds on Oreck's face alone and in addition he was slashed on the arms and wounded in the head. Oreck will likely be marked for life by some of the cuts inflicted. Most of the wounds were neither deep nor serious, but one or two were quite severe. One on the arm was a particularly vicious one while there is also a deep cut on Oreck's head. In his evidence Dr. A. W. M. White, of Schumacher, said that over 60 stitches were necessary to close all the wounds inflicted by Korick's knife. Oreck is a small man, but Korick is a big burly fellow. Constable Noyes, of Schumacher, arrested Korick. The knife and gun were both recovered, the latter being loaded in one chamber and with two empty shells left.

Korick, who is about 41 years of age, was taken to Halleybury last week by Chief Chas. McInnis, of Tisdale, to await there transportation to Kingston.

The salutary sentence given by Magistrate Atkinson in this case will be generally approved, there being very general agreement with the magistrate's suggestion that crimes of this sort should certainly be discouraged.

Games in T.B.A.A. Hockey for Saturday Morning

On account of the weather the ice on Saturday was too soft to allow the playing of all the T.B.A.A. games. There was only one game played. This game was in the Junior schedule and resulted:—Holy Name Juniors, 2; Junior Tuxis, 0.

On Saturday morning of this, weather permitting, The Holy Name Juniors and the Junior Tuxis will re-play the 1-1 tie game of Feb. 1st. Also, at 9:15 the Scouts and Trail Rangers will play to finish the last game in the Junior schedule. Also, on Saturday morning, weather and ice allowing, the Senior games of Feb. 22nd will be played.
