Expect Wadsworth to win Canada Title

Boxing Experts Look for Former Timmins Lad to Win Out at Dominion Boxing Tournament This Week.

Many boxing experts look for Len Wadsworth to win the Dominion title in his class this week at the Dominion amateur boxing championship in Toronto. The tournament is taking place at the Queen City to-day and to-morrow.

Len Wadsworth is a Timmins lad who has made a name for himself in the boxing line. Although only seventeen years old he has taken high place in his class and he is one of the boys that the Polytechnic Amateur Athletic Club at Hamilton hold a specially promising ring recruit. He has been with the Polytechnic for some time now and has won much success. It is true that he did not get through to the finals in the recent Ontario championship at Hamilton, but this was due to other reasons than his merits on the fight he put up. Not only was he pitted against a man ten years or more his senior, but Len should not have been in the ring at all on account of his health at the time. Word from Hamilton is to the effect that he was ill at the time and that his trainer did not want him in the ring but Len's anxiety to battle could not be restrained. On top of all, the opinion seems to be general that Len received a raw decision. One Hamilton paper in referring to the match between Adams and Wadsworth says:—"The only extra round battle of the night came when Roy Adams, the Western Ontario welterweight champion was held even for three rounds by Len Wadsworth, of the Polytechnic A.C. In the extra round the battle appeared still even, but Adams was given the judges' verdict, and the fans voiced their displeasure. The majority, it appeared felt that Wadsworth had won, for the Polytechnic boxer uncovered surprising form and jolted Adams repeatedly."

Another Hamilton paper says:—"Len Wadsworth, of the Polytechnic, Hamilton, was a victim of a bad decision when the judges selected Roy Adams as the winner of the serep at 147 pounds. The boys were chased into an extra round mainly because Wadsworth forced the fighting and stung his opponent frequently. Adams did not show any better advantage in the extra round, and a real razzing arose from the fans when Adams was proclaimed the winner."

Among the honours won this year by Len is the possession of the Grafton trophy. In connection with this one of the Hamilton papers said:—"Another excellent match was that of Joe Gravis, of Hamilton, Western Ontario champion of 1931, against Len Wadsworth, also of Hamilton, in the 147-pound class. This match was for the Grafton trophy in five 3-minute rounds. The champ was outboxed in three of the five stanzas of the battle. In the second, Gravis was sent to his knees groggy, but came back to take more punishment in the third chapter and evened the score on the fourth. Wadsworth won the match on points, and was presented with the Grafton cup by Frank Lennard Jr., president of the Dundas Lions Club.

SCOTTISH DUKE TO VISIT CANADA

"A comment in 'Star Shots on Sport' in the Hamilton Herald recently is worthy of reproduction. This sports writer says:—

"In the opinion of Al Pitcher, boxing instructor at the Polytechnic Athletic Club, Emerald and Barton streets, Len Wadsworth, his young welterweight, will make a strong showing in the Dominion amateur boxing championships in Toronto, May 12th and 13th. Pitcher revealed in conversation with the writer last night that 'Waddy' was a very sick boy for a few days previous to the Ontario title contests in this city last week, and that his condition almost resulted in his withdrawal. He had a heavy cold and was suffering from abdominal boils as well, and his coach thought seriously of resting him up. However, he listened to the youngster's coaxing and allowed him to go into action on the first night of the tournament against Roy Adams of the Canadian A.C. For three rounds Wadsworth held the veteran even, but he weakened in the extra session, and lost the decision. 'I believe,' said Al, 'that I can get the boy in fighting trim for the Dominion championships, and if he is back in his best form by that time, the Polytechnic will supply two champions, Donat Richard, in the featherweight class, and Len Wadsworth in the ranks of the 147-pounders. 'Waddy' will have to beat a great boy in Howard Williams, of Kirkland Lake, the Ontario champion, but when that kid is right, I feel sure he can outpoint any lad of his weight in Canada. Hamilton boxing fans haven't yet seen him when he is fit. He possesses one of the greatest left hands I have ever seen, and he has a fighting heart."

YEARLY AVERAGE OF 1,209 BUSH FIRES SINCE 1917

In view of the following facts and figures, this year (or any year) seems a bad one to attempt to economize in the matter of protecting the forests of Ontario. In recent years Ontario has escaped fairly lightly in the matter of bush fires. This is not so much a case of luck, though no one will find fault with fortune in this particular. All the luck possible is needed in this line. There has been more than luck, however. As in the case of the town of Timmins, freedom from fire has been purchased by fire prevention and fire-fighting methods. The idea has been to stop fires before they start, and this is not possible, at least to stop them before they travel far. To reduce the expenditures this year in forest protection appears to be a poor sort of false economy.

Over a period of 15 years, from 1917 to 1931 inclusive, an average of 1,209 forest fires per year occurred in Ontario with an average acreage burned of 463,135 acres, representing three-tenths of one per cent. of the total area under organized protection, according to figures released by the Provincial Department of Lands and Forests at Queen's Park, Toronto, last week. The total area under protection is 125 million acres.

The worst year from the point of view of destruction was in 1923, when 1,343 fires destroyed 2,120,148 acres of land, including 593,569 acres of timber land. In 1928, the number of fires was comparatively few, 536 in all. In 1931 there were 1,851 fires with 138,287 acres burned.

Canada Too Small for the Reds and Their Parades

Under the heading, "May It be the Last Parade," The Sudbury Star says:—"Sudbury Communists committed a fatal error on May Day when they deliberately flaunted British sentiment in this community by raising the red flag at the head of a parade, instead of the Union Jack, as required by local by-laws. In their summary and expeditious action to quell the parade and place the red flag where it belongs, so far as this country is concerned, the police won the support of true British subjects and right-thinking citizens."

"Canada is proud of her British connection, and to the average Canadian the Union Jack is the symbol of the greatest individual and political freedom existing in the world today. The red flag, symbol of Soviet aims at world domination, is a foreign importation and is entitled to be treated as such. When the red flag or any other foreign flag is raised in Canada, common decency and international ethics dictate that the Union Jack be raised along with it. When the parade was formed, the paraders knew full well what was expected of them. When they refused to comply with the demands of the police commission, they placed themselves in the position of openly flouting public opinion and literally threw out a challenge that red blooded citizenship could scarcely ignore."

"The question of free speech is entirely apart from the issue of last Sunday. No flag in the world has been more tolerant of free speech than the flag which the May Day marchers sought to insult. To say that sympathy for the unemployed is lacking in this country is a blatant untruth, as evidenced by the millions which taxpayers are pouring out in relief measures. Last Sunday's parade organized and advertised as protest of the 'unemployed,' proved in reality to be a public attempt by foreign agitators to show their strength. To confuse the events of May Day or the demands of the agitators with those of the legitimately needy is an insult to the latter."

"Communists in Sudbury have at last appeared before the public in their true colours. Public support, which might Ottawa Journal:—Sometimes we think that this country is suffering from a surfeit of all sorts of education, and that it is becoming too blessed serious. Everybody, or nearly everybody, seems to be going about with a scheme for salvation or looking to turn some additional agency or thing into a cure for souls. Yet, what the country really needs, we almost believe, is a little more of good wholesome fun and laughter.
