LOTS OF FREE ADVICE BUT ADVICE SOMETIMES COSTS

According to the "Roving Reporter" of The Kirkland Lake Northern News there's a story going the rounds of Cobalt about a woman bridge player who had a bet on with another W. B. P. about the practice of cutting the cards. She wanted to know if it was compulsory. So she wrote to a bridge expert in the United States and asked him about it. In reply she received a cordial letter explaining that the practice was "purely a mater of courtesy" -and enclosing a bill for $10 for the advice. Now this was something she didn't expect, and so she immediately went to a lawver and asked him if she was obliged to pay the bridge expert's account. "By all means," the lawyer said, "and my fee is $10."

The moral the "Roving Reporter" draws from the story is that it is cheaper to ask your husband's advice on bridge problems. That would be all right if the husband is a lawyer. The Nick Thachuk, of the Workers' Co- real moral, however, is to patronize
