The Canadian National Railways was equally indefinite or non-committal. A lot of people in the North Land thought it would be such a benefit to the North that they hoped so hard that it might be true that they almost convinced their optimistic souls that there must be something in the rumour. Some other people thought it was too good to be true and hence in their pessimistic hearts they felt the rumour must be false. How to find out, the, something! the truth or falsity of the rumour? KLONDYKE BOB HENDERSON

The "Roving Reporter" column in The Northern News last week has the following paragraph that will be of particular interest to many readers of The Advance:-

Henderson, has passed away at Vancouver, brought back memories of the Klondyke gold field to several Kirkland Lake mining men, including Allan Jeckell, a shift boss at the Wright-Hargreaves mine. The latter knew "Klondyke Bob" years ago, up in Dawson. The old timer was credited with sensational discoveries at Gold Creekdiscoveries that started thousands of gold-crazed adventurers on the trail '98 to the Klondyke, Canada's first big gold area. Although 78 years old, he was again in the Yukon as recently as last Fall, and embarked on another search for gold last October, when he flew from Carcross, Y.T., to an unnamed creek in the Pelyy River area where he had located a vein of pitchblende and rich placer deposits, back in his early pioneering days. His friends advised him against making the trip-it was late in the season, and he wasn't as young as he used to be. But the old timer was intent upon "I'm still a young man," he told them, with that traditional fortitude that is so common to men of the pioneering breed. He was far from being well, however, and there is no doubt that the trip weakened him. "Klondike Bob" died on

Those who have looked into the proposition find that reduced to bare facts the proposition is no more than that Canada buy oil and coal from Russia, paying cash for same, and then Russia will buy some cattle from Cananda on long time credit, the Canadian Government being expected to guarantee the deal. I would be far better for Canada to buy the cattle outright and distribute them to the poor, paying for them rather than waiting until Russia defaults on its payments as it has done before ment but those of the Bolshevik ported. It is refreshing to see the question touched upon from an original standpoint. This is done by The Northern Miner last week. The Miner says:-

There is one commodity that all the world is crying for today, gold, and all countries are willing to pay more for it in goods than at any time in modern history. Among all countries in the world, Canada offers perhaps the best prospects of successful search for new gold mines. Money is available for this search, and those best quali fied to express an opinion say that if the movement is facilitated there will develop in the next few years the greatest mining activity Canada has ever seen. Old fields will be more thoroughly investigated and prospectors will go farther afield than ever before, all looking for gold. It is not unreasonable to suppose that in their investigations base metal prospects, normally valuable, will be located, perhaps not developed immediately, but being in reserve for opening up when other metals come back to higher prices, as they inevitably must.

PETER VERIGAN, DOUKHOBOUR

There have been numerous comment about the deportation of Peter Verigan Doukhobour leader, who has recently been serving a sentence in the penitentiary for breach of the crimina code of Canada. The following paragraph or two from Hansard, the official report of the proceedings of the House of Commons of Canada, Feb. 7th, 1933, place the question briefly and
