Department of Mines Adds to Facilities

Minerographic Laboratory in New Provided for Dressing of Mineral Ores at the Department of Mines at Ottawa.

Canada's mineral industry has at its service perhaps the most modernly equipped Ore Dressing and Metallurgical Laboratories on the continent, and the facilities offered therein by the Department of Mines, at Ottawa, have recently been augmented by the addition of a minerographic laboratory.

The examination of ores and mill products both microscopically and spectrographically not only serves to reduce the number of experimental tests to be made in the Ore Dressing Laboratory, but provides a valuable qualitative guide to quantitative chemical analysis.

In carrying out microscopic and spectrographic studies in the minerographic laboratory, the sample is first mounted in bakelite and polished.

Men in North Object to Losing Wives' Affections

Two or three recent cases in the North would suggest that the men up in this country do not take kindly to the idea of having the affections of their wives alienated by other men.

Another case where a North Land man sued another for alienation of his wife's affections was that in which Lorenzo Church, of Hudson township, sued his neighbour, Stanley Richardson, for damages for the alienation of his wife's affections.

Church, in giving evidence told the story of his married life, of how he had been married in 1916 and two weeks later had enlisted and gone overseas; of how he had been wounded and invalided home in 1918; of how he had discovered that his wife had been unfaithful during his absence, and had been taken back to become the mother of five children, and finally of how he had become suspicious of her actions with Richardson. He had accused her of this and she had left him, going to the Richardson home, staying away from June 13th to September 24th, when she had returned.

Several other witnesses were heard who added little to the evidence already given. Extracts from the examination for discovery were read into the record tending to show that Richardson had spent the night with an unnamed woman in a New Liskeard hotel during the summer of the trouble.

No defence was offered and after addresses by counsel and the judge's charge, the jury retired, coming back after some deliberation to announce a verdict of $700 and costs for the plaintiff.

Hammered thin - ... you may never again be able to REPAIR REMODEL for so little money Of course we say "never again" with qualifications, but the chances are that we're right. From all indications it appears as if building material costs have reached bottom and we firmly believe the same to be true of labour costs. With both costs at their lowest in 20 years, now is the ideal time to remodel, repair or build ... and save a sizeable amount.
