Mr. Sellers took the honours in bridge for the men, with Mr. McDowell second. In euchre Mrs. Bannerman was first, with Mrs. McPhail second. Mr. J. Costain won first in the euchre for men. After a very nice lunch was served, a musical entertainment was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. Mr. Ronald Jones opened with a pianoforte solo. This was followed by a selection from the repertoire of the "Porcupine Quartette," an exceedingly fine foursome of men's voices, singing unaccompanied, "Peaceful Night." The quartette was composed of Messrs J. Jago, Wilson Thomson, Percy Harris and Les Richards. It has seldom been our lot to listen to a finer blending of men's voices than was heard in this quartette. The audience listened breathlessly—there was no false note, or wrong interpretation, and when they had finished, the applause was deafening. They sang as an encore, "Evening Pastoral." Later the quartette sang, "The Owl and the Pussycat," and as encore, "Absent." Mr. Ronald Jones sang well-first, "Mother Macree" and as encore, "Matushka." Mr. Maxwell Smith accompanied him at the piano. Mr. Allan D. Pearce thanked the artists and the visiting brothers and ladies in a neat little speech at the conclusion of the evening.
