Prison Term and the Strap for Robberies

Young Man Sentenced for Armed Robbery and Breaking and Entering. Two Crimes of Last Year Cleared up. Other Police Court Cases.

At the police court on Tuesday the most serious case was that of Walter Moring, a young fellow of eighteen years, who was charged with breaking and entering at night in the case of the robbery at E. H. King's residence last August and also with robbery under arms in the case of the holding up of Miss McColeman in November, 1933. Two younger boys who were implicated with Moring in these cases were tried separately in Juvenile court as they were under the age of sixteen when the crimes were committed. Young Moring pleaded guilty to both charges against him. Evidence was given by Sgt. Ed Moore and Constable R. Grigg, who told of the arrest of the accused lads and admissions made by them after being duly warned. Moring's written statement to the police said that he and the other two lads had been passing Mr. King's and seeing the place in darkness and with signs that the occupants were away, they decided to see what they could find inside. Two of them entered the place through a window, while the other lad was left outside to watch. Only two were concerned in the robbery under arms. Moring and the lad who had watched in the King robbery. Moring used a revolver taken from Mr. King's house. He put the gun through the window and ordered Miss McColeman to hand over her purse. The crime had been planned by him and the other lad, he said, the money obtained being divided between the two of them. The goods taken from Mr. King's house had been divided between the three concerned in this robbery, according to Moring's admissions. When questioned by the Magistrate Moring frankly admitted that the statements made to the police were true and that he was guilty in each case as charged. Before sentencing Moring, Magistrate Atkinson expressed his regret that a young man should pick the pursuit of crime as this young fellow had done. Moring had been sentenced previously for snatching a purse from the hands of a woman on street and running away with it. He had been allowed out of the reformatory before his term had expired for that robbery. Possibly he might not have fallen into the present more serious crime if he had been kept at the reformatory for a longer time. While recognizing that Moring had not had perhaps as good a chance in life as he might have had, the magistrate pointed out that the public had to be protected, especially from the gunman type. He sentenced Moring to two years on each charge, the terms to run concurrently, while for the use of the gun the law required the addition of two years, making four years to be served at Kingston, and ten strokes of the strap. The magistrate, while regretting the necessity for sentencing a young man in this way, explained that the seriousness of the offences and the persistence in following crime made it necessary, and he strongly advised the young man to use the next few years to get a better outlook on life and to train himself to live honestly and by industry rather than attempting to live at the expense of others. The other two lads were tried in Juvenile court. One of them pleaded guilty to breaking and entering Mr. King's house. The other, while pleading not guilty to the two charges against him, admitted the truth of his complicity in them when he took the stand in his own defence. Character evidence was given in behalf of both these boys, to the effect that they had been good lads until they had gotten into bad company. The sister of the one boy told the court that she was sure that with the lesson he had had she could keep him on the straight path hereafter. A plea was made for the other lad also to be given another chance. Magistrate Atkinson reserved sentence on the two boys until next week, in the meantime allowing them to return to their homes on the pledge that they would present themselves next week for sentence. The patient work of the police in these cases cleared up these robberies which had been among the very few unsolved cases in 1933.

Complete Course in Cooking Available

The Advance Offering All Readers the Equivalent of a Complete Cooking Course. Many Compliments for Feature.

The first instalment of the complete course in cooking offered to readers of The Advance was published last week in this paper and there have been innumerable words of praise for this new feature. Skilled cooks in town have commented on the thoroughness of the article published last week and the many helpful hints it contained. Less experienced housewives have added their praise, referring to the clear and logical way in which the matter of cooking and kindred arts was introduced by the opening article. Further instalments are being awaited with keen interest.

In this feature, the second instalment of which will be found in the second section of this issue, the Canadian Cooking School presents a domestic science course in twelve easy lessons. The Advance, through the co-operation of other leading weekly newspapers is able to present this valuable feature free to its readers.

The course has been prepared by Anna Lee Scott, a recognized expert, who is a domestic science college graduate of the highest standing. The course is thoroughly practical for the beginner and most helpful to the skilled. This course has been tried and tested by experts and by practical housewives alike and the consensus of opinion is that it is unique in its clearness, thoroughness and value.

Supplementary to the twelve lessons, which will be published in the next three months, one each week, the Canadian Cooking School has had its director, Anna Lee Scott, prepare three books of new and helpful ideas. These books will be considered valuable by all and to many they will appear indispensable. The books are—"Easy Way Cook Book," "Planning the Party," and "Marketing and Meal Planning." These books will be sold at 25 cents, less than the regular price of one. The books are being distributed at a loss, the price set on them being less than the actual cost of production. The Advance newsboys and newsgirls will take orders for these books at any time and will deliver them as soon as the books are here for delivery next week, but in the meantime you can give your newsboy or any of the local newsboys of The Advance your order for these books. When the books are ready the newsboys will deliver them to those ordering. The boys already have a number of orders to fill. The newsboys are the only ones, except the readers of The Advance, who will make any money out of the sale of these books, being allowed a commission on all books sold and delivered. As the books are sold at less than the cost of publishing, all others concerned in their distribution are actually losers.

In the meantime, The Advance recommends to its readers, the Canadian Cooking School course. Read each and every instalment from now until the end of the twelfth lesson. It will be well worth while. It might be a good idea also to preserve each lesson as it appears and keep it for future reference.

LOCALS

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. C. Eastman, of Toronto, are visiting friends in town.

C. G. Williams, of Toronto, was a visitor to the camp this week.

An epidemic of mumps is reported at Enghart.

Kirkland Lake is considering a $20,000 extension to its hospital.

An effort is being made to revive the Haileybury Horticultural Society, which has been dormant for the past three years. Haileybury was one of the pioneers in the matter of having a horticultural society and Haileybury at one time was also outstanding as the most attractive of residential towns.

The Haileyburian last week says:—"Mrs. O. J. Thorpe, who has been ill for the past week or two, is much improved and, with Mr. Thorpe and Miss Ella, will accompany Miss Velma Thorpe to Hamilton at the week-end for her marriage to Mr. James Irving there."

COBALT SEPARATE SCHOOLS RE-OPEN AFTER SHUT-DOWN

Last week Cobalt Separate schools were re-opened after being closed for a day or two. The trustees ordered the closing of the schools on account of the financial situation. The school board had no money on hand or available and the purchase of a couple of cars of coal was necessary. The school board could not see how the money could be raised for the coal. Salaries, fortunately, were paid to the end of the year. Failure of ratepayers to pay taxes has been the cause of the situation. When the trustees considered it necessary to close down the schools at Cobalt the matter was also taken up with the inspector and the Dept. of Education. Both from the inspector and Toronto there came instructions to the trustees that the schools must not be closed. It is a letter from the Dept. of Education pointed out that the trustees laid themselves liable to penalties if they did not keep the schools open. The upshot of the whole matter was that the separate schools at Cobalt were re-opened after a day or two holiday. In the meantime the school trustees are making every effort to have taxes collected so that the schools may be carried on. In some cases of taxes in arrears nothing can be accomplished by drastic action when those concerned are on relief. There are other cases, however, where taxes are not paid that might be paid if they concerned really wished it. In these latter cases drastic action is very likely to be taken.

Three Men Sent for Trial in the Cobalt Police Court

Three residents of Coleman Township were committed for trial at a higher tribunal when they appeared in police court at Cobalt on Saturday before Magistrate Atkinson. They are Richard Bunclark, Kerr Lake, accused of high-grading, and Sven Maki and Thomas Welsh, who live on the east side of Cobalt Lake, and who are charged with breaking and entering by night the store of E. Puranen, Lang Street. All were represented by George Mitchell, K.C. Feature of the evidence for the Crown in the Maki-Welsh case was the testimony of Provincial Constable Stromberg, who swore he had remained in the town lock-up wash-room unknown to the accused in the cells adjoining and had heard them arrange an alibi, he said, to account for their movements on Saturday night, January 13. They were arrested early on the Sunday. Welsh after a scuffle with Chief Delves, and Maki, in bed at his home later. Constable Stromberg produced what he said was a record of their conversation.
