Good Food Required by Growing Children

Some of the Things Good for the Youngsters. How the Appetite May be Tempered by the Right Kind of Food.

The question of correct feeding for the growing youngster is taken up in a recent issue of The Toronto Mail and Empire by Ann Adams, an expert in domestic science and kindred arts. The writer says:—

"The problem of correct feeding for the growing youngster is one that involves many things, including certain knowledge of simple diet wisdom, and more than a smattering of child psychology at times. Many a child faces a most proper meal—but derives small benefit from it.

"All too often the child who is 'made' to eat, will not eat at all, putting at the table, throwing his food and even the dishes about, and in other ways making life miserable for his mother. If he is ignored at meal time, natural appetite will soon make him take a quiet part in the family meal. And by ignored we mean to supply him with the essential foods, as attractively served as possible, and then pay no more attention to him.

"Most young children discover early that bad behavior at the table makes them the centre of interest. And being the centre of things is just what they want most. If they are told to eat, and refuse, they gain only more attention, and the endless chain of trouble is started and kept going. The child is not properly nourished, becomes a nuisance to everybody at the table, is spoiled, and the mother has the burden of a cross irritable, sick child with which to cope.

Attractive Wares Help
If possible let the child have his own table and chair, and let him have his food at some other time than the family meal time. His own dishes, an easily grasped tumbler, an easily held cup, small fork, knife and spoon, add him in handling his food, and if the dishes are bright coloured, if some amusing toy is added to the table, he will usually be diverted and enjoy his food without coaxing.

Children like to eat from a tray once in a while, or from some unusual place in the house; so to vary the mealtime procedure, let the child have a certain amount of adventure in his eating.

On the child's luncheon tray place a small jug of hot cocoa, a cup, baked prune whip, and an egg poached in milk. All easily prepared, inexpensive and nourishing. Small slices of whole wheat bread, or graham crackers make a good addition to this. Here's how the dishes are prepared:

Egg Poached in Milk
One-fourth cup milk; one egg; few grains salt. Pour the milk in a buttered casserole, individual size. Drop a fresh egg into the centre. Sprinkle with salt, cover and bake for 15 minutes in a moderate oven, 325 degrees.

Baked Prune Whip
One-fourth cup prune pulp (five large stewed prunes mashed); two tablespoons sugar; one-half teaspoon

Gold Tax Termed an Invasion of Provincial Jurisdiction

"Unconstitutional" is Claim of Gold Producers. By Reducing the Revenue of Gold Mines by $10,000,000 a year the Income Taxable by the Province (and by Municipalities) Reduced Same Amount. Strong Case Against New Tax.

Last week The Advance referred to the claim of Hon. Mr. Taschereau, Premier of Quebec, that the ten per cent. tax on the gross production of gold was unconstitutional. Premier Taschereau pointed out that under the British North America Act the natural resources, mines, timber, etc., were strictly under provincial jurisdiction and the Dominion Government had no power or right to take anything in the nature of a step toward confiscation of any of these natural resources of the provinces. The same idea is emphasized, along with other points, in the resolutions passed at Toronto by gold producers of the Dominion. These resolutions cover the case against the proposed gold tax so completely that they are worthy of careful note.

The resolutions referred to were passed at a meeting of the gold producers following the return of the delegation which went to Ottawa to protest the tax in an interview with Hon. W. A. Gordon.

The resolutions describe the tax as unjust, confiscatory and unconstitutional. Practically all gold-producing companies of Ontario and representatives of the principal gold-producing companies of British Columbia, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Quebec attended the conference.

The conference asked the gold-producing provinces "to join the representatives of the industry in bringing home to the Dominion Government the consequences of such a levy." The tax was described as "a direct invasion of provincial jurisdiction and therefore unconstitutional." It will retard development of mining and affect practically all industries, the conference charged.

At the close of the conference of gold producers at Toronto last week, G. C. Bateman, secretary of the Ontario Mining Association, announced the decisions of the meeting. One resolution was forwarded to the premier, Hon. R. B. Bennett, to the finance minister, Hon. E. N. Rhodes, and to the Minister of Mines for the Dominion, Hon. W. A. Gordon. Another resolution passed was forwarded to the premiers and ministers of mines of British Columbia, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Quebec.

The following resolution was despatched to Prime Minister R. B. Bennett, Mr. Rhodes and Mr. Gordon:

"Resolved, that this meeting unanimously records its unalterable opposition to the new 10 per cent. confiscatory and unconstitutional tax on the gross production of the gold mines as brought down by the federal budget resolution of April 18 and made effective April 19, which creates a direct levy by the Dominion on the gross value of the production of other basic industries, that is, the products of agriculture, the fisheries and forests."

The text of the resolution sent to provincial premiers and ministers of mines follows:

"Resolved that this body make representations to the various provincial governments that the 10 per cent. tax on the gross value of all gold produced in Canada as brought down in the federal budget April 18, is unjust, confiscatory and not in the best interests of Canada for the following reasons:

"1.—We are advised that the method of applying the tax is a direct invasion of provincial jurisdiction and therefore unconstitutional.

"2.—By reducing the revenue of gold mining companies by $10,000,000 this year the net income taxable by the province is reduced by approximately the same amount, the major part of which is taxable by the provinces at from six to 10 per cent.

"3.—Because mining is the backbone of colonization plans for Northern Canada and because in this plan the several provinces have expended large sums in building roads, railroads, means of communication, hydro-electric power plants and transmission lines, and because these several provincial governments at real sacrifice to their own revenue requirements and in their wisdom saw fit to forego additional taxes to build up this growing industry, the new federal tax will destroy the objective the provinces had in view.

Add to Relief
"4.—The curtailment of new developments and the elimination of great tonnage of low-grade ores in producing properties and the reduction in the amount of capital available for prospecting, and exploration must have the effect of reducing employment in an industry that is not seasonal and that pays high wages and will materially increase the number of those in receipt of public relief.

"5.—This new tax is a challenge to those who have repeatedly asserted that money coming into Canada to develop its natural resources would be given built up by the provincial authorities at great effort over a period of years must give way to apprehension and doubt.

"6.—This tax on gross production applies whether or not a mine is making a profit and must of necessity result in cessation of operations in some properties and eliminate the profit in others.

"7.—The application of the tax will reduce the life of the mines and of the communities dependent on them.

"8.—The tax affects every class of industry in Canada as the continually increasing purchases by the mining communities is a most important factor in the prosperity of agricultural and manufacturing centres throughout the Dominion.

"For these and other reasons we ask the provincial authorities to join the representatives of the industry in bringing home to the Dominion Government the consequences of such a levy."

Meeting at the same time the Ontario Prospectors' and Developers' Association appointed a delegation composed of Robert Jowsey and W. E. Segsworth to confer with the Federal Government in an attempt to gain revision of the tax. Messrs Jowsey and Segsworth returned to Ottawa to take the question up further with the Government.

Not Difficult to Guess Why These Boys are Honest

In these days when some people who have wasted their own opportunities are all in favour of taking away from others the savings they may have made, and when there are other evidences of lack of regard for the property rights of others, it is pleasing to note cases where honesty in its best sense is recognized as the proper course of life. There were two noteworthy examples of this honesty in the North last week. The boys who found a bundle of high-grade wrapped in newspapers and lying near an old trail at Kirkland Lake, turned over the gold, worth over $100.00 to the police. The other case was at Cobalt where two young boys found a purse containing a small sum of money and promptly turned it over to the police. In both the Kirkland Lake and the Cobalt cases the boys concerned were from families on relief. The Cobalt boys had to carry their find nearly three miles to turn it over to the authorities. In the Kirkland Lake case the boys took the gold home and were promptly sent to the police station with the parcel. "Fingers doesn't mean keepings," the mother explaining, pointing out to the boys that the gold certainly did not belong to them and so they had no right to keep it. In this mother's words may be found the secret of the honesty of the boys. They were taught at home about honesty and fair dealing. This is no doubt the secret for the many evidences that arise from time to time of honesty on the part of boys. Honesty among boys is not at all rare in this North Land. The Advance sees scores of cases of this honesty during the course of the year. It is as common as good training in the homes. Boys who are not taught to respect the rights of others can scarcely be expected to show honesty or consideration. It is well for all to admit that honesty is not confined to any one class, nor on the other hand does any one class have a monopoly of greed or crookedness. So far as boys are concerned the majority of them will simply reflect their training.
