Interesting Case of a Thief Who Robs Autos.

A case that will be of special interest to readers of The Advance comes from Noranda. Part of the special interest will be from the fact that two of the police who were instrumental in catching the thief were formerly members of the Timmins police force. Chief Perreault of Noranda was for years a popular officer on the local force and Constable Holley was Sgt. Foley of the Timmins force until a few months ago being made a sergeant here when W. Rich was appointed chief of police here at the beginning of the year by the new council. The Noranda case of stealing from cars is detailed in despatches. Lucien Aytte, aged 32 years, of 144 Fifth street, Noranda, on a recent Saturday evening about midnight went through cars parked before the Noranda Hotel while their owners were attending a dance. He took any articles he fancied. The police were informed eventually that a man was seen carrying bundles from the vicinity of the hotel and depositing them under the sidewalk some blocks away. Constables Ross and Holley went to the scene and found Aytte busy with a flashlight searching a car. He had secured blankets, windbreakers, cushions and other articles. Later in the day he made a clean breast of his activities to Chief Wilfrid Perreault. When brought to court he pleaded guilty. Now comes an interesting double feature. The man was fined $25.00 and costs for his thievery, which seems rather unusual, the alternative imposed being thirty days with an additional eight days in case the costs were not paid. The fine and costs were duly paid, which is also an interesting touch. Of course the stolen goods were returned to the owners so they did not lose from the thefts.

Toronto Mail and Empire—If pupils in the public schools can be educated properly without the occasional use, or threat, of the strap, they are a good deal more amenable to moral suasion than their parents, which is not a view generally held.

MISSES COUNT IN ASSAULT CASES TO JUDGE BY THIS ONE

Some flustered E. Kerr Lake was aird in police court recently. Jack O'Flarity was charged with assaulting James Chitty. There had been some trouble it appeared over Chitty's sister who had been staying with the O'Flarity family. O'Flarity said that Chitty had hit him first. For the minute it looked as if Chitty would lose the case, but when O'Flarity had swung at Chitty and missed him, a conviction was registered against O'Flarity. The fine was ten dollars and costs, a total of $27.00.

Beer Rooms Condemned by Kirkland Lake People

Many in Timmins believe that the new beer and wine privileges are a bad mistake and that drunkenness has increased under the beverage rooms. This view is supported by the number of drunks each week at police court, and it is well known that only a proportion of the actual number of drunks ever gets as far as police court. The conditions at Kirkland Lake are very similar to these at Timmins. On the last night in Kirkland Lake there were nineteen drunks arrested, which is considered a very high number. The Northern News last week published interviews with prominent citizens of Kirkland Lake condemning the beverage rooms. Chief Shane said that drunkenness has increased since the beverage rooms have been opened.

Chief Shane and Councillor Walter Little are both quoted by The Northern News in the matter. The following paragraph indicates some of the views of Chief Shane in regard to the matter of drunkenness as related to the beverage rooms:—

"There certainly was not the number of drunken men on the street you see now. There has got to be a change over conditions as they are now. If the police have to keep answering calls to herd drunks on pay nights they're not going to have much time to protect property and the lives of citizens which after all is the first duty of any force."

Councillor Walter Little, chairman of the police committee of the township council, claimed he had felt conditions were bad enough to warrant a request to council for extra constables for special pay night duty in front of the beverage rooms.

"But Chief Shane tells me," the police chairman said, "that it is expected the new regulations will allow for policemen to make a regular patrol of beverage rooms and if that is done he does not feel there will be any need for new men. So we'll wait to see what the new regulations bring on that angle."

"So far as the rest of it goes," Mr. Little, who came to Swastika before there was a Kirkland Lake and has watched the town grow up, said, "you can't make my condemnation of the system of beverage rooms too strong. And that is not personal feeling either. I am not in favour of beverage rooms at all but if provision is made for them I suppose we must have them but at least they could be run so there would not be the amount of drunkenness there is at present."

"I've never been in a beverage room supposed to be a rough mining camp and I never saw the drunkenness there has been since the beverage rooms started."

"As chairman of the police committee I've received numerous complaints from women who said they were afraid to walk by hotels where drunken men were standing outside."

"I've never been in a beverage room and perhaps I don't know what they're up against there, but judging from the results as they're seen staggering down the streets there can be improvements. And you can't blame the policemen. We'd need 50 men doing nothing but looking after drunks and then they couldn't get them all."

Rev. E. G. Dymond, rector of St. Peter's Church of England, said he believed a great mistake had been made in allowing beverage rooms.

"I wouldn't say there is more drunkenness than there was before but we certainly see more of it. The Liquor Control Act was an improvement over the old O.T.A. It should not have been amended."

From the above it would appear that conditions in Kirkland Lake are much the same as in Timmins. Here the average good citizen is inclined to feel that the wine and beer business has not worked out well. Some are inclined to blame this on the Hepburn government or at least on the fact that proper preparations were not made before the new regulations were put in force. It may be that more careful preparation and a better choice of those to whom licenses were granted would have helped a lot, but at the same time there is reason to believe that the freer sale of beer and wine was a mistake in itself, and that the idea of Rev. Mr. Dymond hits the mark when he says that the Liquor Control Act should not have been amended.

Cellar Changes in Commercial Bowling

Art Saint Practices Uplift and Gets his Boys up in the Bowling World. The Power Team Still has the Juice on.

The T. & N. O. were not fussy about the cellar The Advance rented them; they said it was damp, so handed it back to the printers who are used to anything that's not nice.

The railroaders had an easy win over Gambles and by taking all four points put themselves on even terms with the fruitiers.

Dick Fleming had a very bad night which cost the team valuable points. Bellevue turned in his usual good game to keep the railroaders in the lead.

This will likely put Gambles down the table a little tomorrow when they bump up against the Power, for the electricians have a fighting team this year.

The Advance went down fighting a great fight with the Power and should have had two points at least, but the breaks were against them in the second game.

The first game was a humdinger and up to the half-way mark it looked bad for the printers. At the end of the sixth McHugh had a gain of 55 pins over Hornby and the latter then struck the game to win by 40 pins. There was a deficit when the next three had bowled and again Wallingford pulled the game out of the fire to win it by 4 pins.

The printers had the next game well in hand till near the finish when the electricians started striking out to win by 31 pins.

The electricians turned on the juice for the third spasm and the printers never had a look in.

The honour roll got a few more decorations this week:—F. Hornby and G. Wallingford, Advance, 730 and 647; E. Salomaa, E. Towers and B. McQuarrie, 708, 678 and 604; R. Bellevue and C. Armstrong, T. & N. O., 696 and 604; P. Nicolson, Gambles, 601.

BOWL ALONG

Art says if The Advance wants more type, the express is still in existence. O.K., Art, you will see that your name is in print this week.

"That was smart work, Eric, when you threw that banana skin back at Charlie! Did he slip!"

The T. & N. O. must have had a sick parade by the amount of number nines the M.O. dished out.

Dick Fleming says he will find those pins one of these nights. How about tomorrow night?

Forget the bananas and bring some pineapples along! They go off with a bang and scatter.

Tie! Tie! who's got the tie? Peter had it; Ero got his hands on it, but Fred finally got it.

The Power boys are going to buy a fine comb for Ero and Bill after the way they tried to sneak the first game from the printers. It was a hard game to win, and hard one to lose.

It's nice to know Bert has redeemed himself at last.

Fred's strike was the best of the evening and they are still trying to figure it out. Here's the solution:—the ball hits the head pin, this spins, and the ball goes through into the pit; the head pin hits the two and rebounds over to the 3 and 5, knocks them over; the two pin goes into the pit and bobs up just enough for it to knock down the four pin. That's what he calls a perfect strike ball.

Teddy also pulled one nearly as good. Alfie came out of the bush and says there is still plenty of firewood left. How he went through those trees without knocking them down was nobody's business.

Apart from the Power the race is in a tight spot now. Can the printers come through again tomorrow night with the railroaders and take second place?

What did Capt. Leach do to Joe, Joe?

Death of Miss Bradley in Portuguese West Africa

Last week The Advance referred to the death of Miss Annie Bradley in a motor accident in Portuguese West Africa where she was serving as a United Church missionary. The late Miss Bradley had wide circles of friends and acquaintances in Timmins to whom the news of the said death of this gifted young lady is a matter of deepest regret. Miss Bradley, whose home was at Halleybury, was on furlough for some months a year or so ago and addressed the missionary societies throughout the North, speaking at Timmins among the other places visited. In reference to her death The Halleyburian last week had the following to say:—

"The whole community was shocked on Monday when news came of the death, in a motor accident, of Miss Annie Elizabeth Bradley, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Bradley, Rufus street, and the sister of Fire Chief W. Bradley. She was a missionary of the United Church in Portuguese West Africa and it was near her station there that the tragedy occurred. No particulars have been received yet, the news of Miss Bradley's death being contained in a wire to Rev. W. A. Beecroft, pastor of the United Church here, from the Mission headquarters in Toronto. A cable from Africa had conveyed the tragic news to headquarters. Miss Bradley worked as a teacher of the native Africans at the Mission of Chissamba, in Angola, 600 miles up country from the port of Lobito, and had been there about seven years, with the exception of one year spent on furlough and in lecturing in this country. Miss Bradley, who was born in Kinburn, Carleton County, on January 12, 1903, had spent her childhood and early girlhood in Halleybury. She was a public school teacher, holding positions at Moore's Cove, Elk Lake and North Bay, before taking up missionary work as her life's vocation. It was in 1927 that she first left her home to engage in this work, after a year's training in Toronto, and the first year of her foreign service was spent in Portugal acquiring the language. She then went to Africa and continued her work, in which she was a devoted servant, until she was given a furlough in 1932. She came home in June of that year and enjoyed a six-month holiday, after which she spent another six months in lecturing at various points in the interests of the missions. She left in June of 1933 on her return to Africa. Miss Bradley was a favourite among the young people of Halleybury and the district. Her unfailing and earnest labour in the cause which she had chosen as her life work were the admiration of her many friends and the sorrow expressed on all sides is very great. To her bereaved parents and only brother goes the sincere sympathy of the whole town of Halleybury, together with that of a great circle of friends throughout the district. The example of devotion to duty, expressed in unselfish service and the leaving behind of her home and loved ones, which she set, will not be forgotten."
