Say Another Threat Note Received by John Labatt

According to word from London, Ont., John Labatt, head of the big brewery firm, has received another threat letter. This latest one is supposed to have been sent by Albert Pegram, the gentleman who was supposed to be in Timmins some months ago. Reports from London suggest that the latest threat letter warns Labatt that if his entire family will be wiped out if he gives evidence that will convict the kidnapers. Information Please!

Human beings are markets. Every man, woman and child is a daily wantor of many things, most of which have to be bought from some retailer. But to see, the seller must go to the market. It is sadly wrong if and when the seller waits for buyers to go to him. This means that the retailer who wants to supply many buyers must take his merchandise, in a figurative sense, to where buyers are assembled.

And the assembly place of buyers—men, women and children—is their newspaper. In the form of advertisements retailers display their wares. Every advertisement can be likened to a stall. These retailers' stalls get a close inspection of buyers. They are scanned to see if they show things of necessity or desire, and when the offerings of these stalls are in accord with buyer's wants and needs, then sales are made.

The retailer who loses out is he who has no stall—no advertisement at this place of assembly. His absence from the marketplace represented by the newspaper and its advertisements is advantageous to those who have advertisements in the newspaper.

The buying public wants its buying transactions made as easy as possible. It wants its time and its steps saved. It likes to find, in the comfort and peace of the home what sellers have to offer. In the home decisions are arrived at. Women and others plan their shopping and their purchases in advance. Their newspaper is their informer. Retailers who neglect to provide buyers with information in the form of advertisements in our newspaper miss many sales. It is never economy to be silent about what one has to sell.
