Featuring Timmins Trio at Winnipeg Gathering

Victor Dorego, Ernest Lorenzo and Michale Espelator to be at Mining Institute Meeting in Winnipeg This Month

G. G. Ommanney, of the press committee of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy, writing this week from Montreal, has sent out the following which will be of general interest in this part of the North: "At the large annual meetings of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy the serious proceedings are relieved by gayer functions for which these meetings are famous. "Many of the artists engaged to entertain the Institute men and their adies are of necessity professionals. "The Timmins Trio, however, which has appeared in mining meetings both in Canada and in New York, consists of three men whose actual daily vocation is mining. They frequently appear in miner's working clothes, complete to helmets and lamps. "Victor Dorego, accordionist, Ernest Lorenzo, tenor and Michale Espelator, baritone, comprise the "team." "So highly is their music enjoyed that funds have been raised, and leave of absence from the mines obtained, so that these lads may appear at the Winnipeg meeting of the Institute this month. "They will appear at the cabaret, smoker, and other social functions and will be given a cordial reception by the mining men at the big meeting."

Fr. O'Gorman Writes of His Visit to Madeira

Interesting and Informative Account of Opening of Mediterranean Tour. "Winter Sports without Snow." Gibraltar a Free Port.

Before leaving Timmins on his tour of the Mediterranean and the Holy Land, Rev. Fr. J. R. O'Gorman, of the Church of the Nativity, was good enough to promise to write something about his trip for readers of The Advance. On a previous occasion some years ago letters from Rev. Fr. O'Gorman were eagerly awaited, and his letters on this tour will be of even greater general interest. Below will be found the first letter from Fr. O'Gorman:— On Board "Samaria," Cunard-White Star Liner, Feb. 13th, 1935.

Dear Friends—The Advance, having requested me to send these notes of our cruise, I begin the series to-day. We left New York early on Feb. 2nd. The trip to Madeira was uneventful. We landed at Funchal, the chief town of these Portuguese islands on Feb. 10. As the chief product of Madeira is wine, our first visit was to a wine "lodge." Here we were shown through the establishment and of course treated to some of their best and oldest vintage. Other native industries are wickerwork and embroidery, which we were offered in all forms and at very reasonable prices. The climate of the islands is very equable. It was like a day in late May at home while we were there. Vegetation was well under way and semi-tropical plants and flowers were much in evidence. Two of the curiosities of Madeira are the bullock "carros," which compete with motors for the transport of visitors along the cobble streets, and the wicker "toboggans." Winter sports without snow! The toboggans were used after we had run up to the top of the mountain above Funchal by a funicular railway. The view from the summit was magnificent. The thrill of the slide was mild, as two stout natives put on the brakes whenever speed increased a little. Another form of entertainment was an exhibition of diving for coins by small boys. Quite a number of people from England spend the winters in Madeira and so we found our ignorance of Portuguese no handicap. The wine "lodge" officials are all English. Early on Feb. 12th, we were up to disembark in Cadiz. A train took the party to Seville, a distance of almost 100 miles. Having a box lunch on the train, upon our arrival we were divided into parties for seeing the sights of the historic capital of Andalusia. Our first visit was to the Alcazar, the former royal palace, originally built by the Moors, a thousand years ago. The

Taxi Confiscated and Man Fined in Beer Case

Taxi Driver Assessed $100 and Costs and the Car he was Driving is Seized. Other Cases at Police Court Here on Tuesday.

A taxi was confiscated as the result of a conviction registered against J. Claremont in Tuesday's police court. From police evidence given, it appeared that Claremont had been using the vehicle for delivering beer at night. One night last week Constable Olsen found Claremont in the act of taking a case of beer from the rear of the taxi. He was apparently going to deliver it at a nearby house. Even though the car was not registered in Claremont's name, the crown asked that it be seized. Deputy-Chief M. Salley testified that the taxi had been watched for some time on suspicion. The magistrate issued the order for confiscation, and Claremont was fined $100 and costs. The majority of the court's time was taken up with the hearing of charges against Joe Morgan of keeping a common gaming house. After much evidence from both defence and prosecution, Magistrate Atkinson dismissed the case. The police raided Morgan's place on the rear of a Pine street south lot on Feb. 24th. Constables Cyr, Hawley, Cullane, and Desreche made up the police party and all gave evidence as to what they saw and heard. The gist of the police evidence was that they had gone up to the door, waited outside for awhile listening to "checking" betting and raising going on; had rapped the door on the third rapping they entered. Five men seated around an oval-covered table started to get up from their seats, but were told to remain where they were. There was seven cents in cash on the table. Prior to the raid Constable Cyr had looked into the room and had seen six men sitting around the table playing cards and apparently gambling. As it was Sunday night, the men were charged with gaming on Sunday and the owner with keeping a gaming house. Constable Hawley stated that Morgan had told him that he "ran a game" on Hollinger pay nights and that he had sold some beer. Morgan denied that he took a rake-off any of the games played at his place and swore that the men who were there Sunday night were not gambling. The players themselves swore that they had not been playing for money and the presence of the money on the table was explained by most of them as coming from Morgan's pocket when he reached in for some matches. The money came out with the matches and had been left on the table, they said. The same evidence was repeated when the six men were charged with gaming on Sunday, but the magistrate interrupted the cross-examination of one of them by saying "I don't think it's worth while questioning this man. I don't believe a word he says." All pleaded not guilty and after listening carefully to the repeated evidence and the protestations of the men that they were not playing for money, the magistrate fined four of them $10 and costs. Those convicted were R. Walker, Victor Keyes, Joe Morgan and A. Campbell. "There is no doubt in my mind," commented his worship, "that they were playing for money." Two late-comers were dismissed. Two 16-year-old boys pleaded guilty to breaking and entering by night, and theft. The offence occurred on March 1st at 38 H. Hollinger avenue. Crown Attorney S. A. Caldbick explained that they had only taken a few bottles of beer and a couple of decks of cigarette cards. One of the boys had been convicted in March of 1933 of a similar crime but had been released on suspended sentence and had signed a bond to keep the peace for two years. The two years would be up within a short time. He was sentenced to 30 days at Halleybury jail but the other lad was freed on signing a bond for $200 to keep the peace for two years. Police believe that these convictions clean up the series of break-ins in the Hollinger townsite, and it was only through good detective work on the part of the force that the boys were brought to time. Three minor traffic cases were heard and fines of one dollar and costs imposed in each. The offences involved not stopping at a stop sign, parking more than 50 minutes on Pine street, and parking so as to obstruct traffic. A fourth traffic charge was dismissed when the man charged produced witnesses that satisfied the court he had stopped at the intersection of Pine street and Third avenue late one night last week. Victor Delmonte pleaded guilty to reckless driving and paid $10 and costs, as did Domini Gurda. Gurda had been driving a car with three in the front seat and one hanging over the front fender. Seven first offence drunks paid $10 and costs. One was a woman; one man, freed on bail, failed to appear so his bail was exonerated. John W. R. Wright pleaded guilty to supplying liquor to an intoxicated person on March 3. His fine was $50 and costs. Sophia Korhan again failed to appear at police court when her name was called. The magistrate told the son to go home and get her, as she had no lawful excuse for not being there. Court was over for the afternoon before her case was called again. She will appear next week. A fine of $10 and costs was imposed on a man charged with indecent exposure. He pleaded not guilty but could produce no witnesses to strengthen his side of the case. Albert Nadon, charged with vagrancy, pleaded not guilty and was given a week to get out of town. He had been found begging from door to door on Maple street. He comes from Quebec and the magistrate gave him a chance to get back there without going to jail first. A Pomeroy, another vagrant, had a long story to tell about having been robbed of $20 and being found short of cash. He sounded like an old-timer at the game to the magistrate and was given a week to make himself scarce. Arthur C. Curuelle asked for a week's remand when he was charged with obtaining money by false pretences. Police claim he passed a worthless cheque for one dollar. A man and his wife had a quarrel of some sort from which the lady came out with a badly swollen eye. Before the case was heard, the wife, through interpreters, told the court that she forgave him all and with the magistrate's warning that there was to be no more wife-beating, the man departed.

A charge of stealing $25 worth of firewood laid by Nick Carich against Henri Legault was dismissed when there was insufficient evidence to prove the theft. Legault had sold some of Carich's wood, thinking that he was acting on Carich's order and when he had offered the money to Carich, it had been refused. Since Legault speaks French only and Carich is of European extraction, they needed an interpreter even in their business transactions as well as in court. A night session of the court was held at which a case from Schumacher under the Deserted Wives' and Children Maintenance Act was heard. It was dismissed.

Time Opportune to Press for Government Station

In an editorial referring to the proposal to have a wire service to enable small radio stations to handle the programmes of the Canadian Radio Commission, The Halleybury last week says:—

"While it was in Halleybury that the latter proposal was first given a start, at a joint meeting of Boards of Trade of the three towns last fall, the general feeling now is that the larger project would be the best in the end. Everyone would welcome almost any improvement in the radio service, if it would enable owners of receiving sets to follow more closely Canadian programmes. The justice of the claims of the North for something better than it has been received cannot be denied. The same license fee is paid throughout the Dominion and is collected probably as thoroughly in the North as in any other part, so there is no reason why this section should not be given consideration. It is said that the time is opportune to press for the establishment of a high power broadcasting station, so there should be no division in the ranks."

Lent Commenced on Wednesday, March 6

Yesterday was Ash Wednesday, the Beginning of the Lentening Season. Forty days of Lent.

Yesterday was the first day of the religious season of Lent, observed throughout Christian churches in varying forms, but in general regarded as the most important event. Ash Wednesday, the name given to this beginning of the Lenten season, is a day set aside in many churches of the Western world for special services and rites. According to information available on the subject, the exact date at which celebration of Ash Wednesday became a part of the programme of Christian churches is not known but in very early times, ashes were placed on the heads of penitents, who were then admitted to penance. Later the custom came to be applied not only to penitents but to all the clergy and members of the church. In this form Ash Wednesday is still marked in some of the large churches of the world. The observance of the season of Lent itself has varied with the ages but at present each church has definite laws in regard to it that are generally prevalent. In the Roman Catholic church, the season consists of 40 days of regulated eating and special services, but in the Greek church, it is 35 days in length.
