Dropping of Tax Means
More Work in Low Grade

That the tax changes will promote work on lower grade gold ores is noted by Charles G. Williams, secretary of the Canadian Metal Mining Association who said:
"Abandonment of the Bullion Tax and the substitution of a tax on profit will meet with general favour, even though we may not agree with the ratios of depletion allowances decided upon. A return to taxation based on profits will permit greater exploration of marginal ore, which was definitely excluded under the Bullion Tax; and the Government is to be congratulated for adopting this course."

Prof. Bouchard Extols Value of Country Life

Tells Kiwanis that Present Crisis will Not be Truly Over Until the Heads and Hearts of More Canadians are Turned Again to Farming. An eloquent and Convincing Address.

Canada will never be out of the present crisis until the "heads and hearts" of more Canadian people are turned to farming, it was predicted by Prof. Georges Bouchard, M.P., at the Kiwanis luncheon on Monday. "Our troubles to-day are not only financial ones," he declared. "Our society to-day is not well balanced."

Prof. Bouchard was accompanied on his visit by Jos. A. Bradette, member of the House of Commons for Temiskaming North, who told the Kiwanians a little of his friend's accomplishments as a professor and writer of agricultural subjects. Mr. Bradette apologized for the shortness of their visit. "I am going back to Ottawa to-day because I want to fight for radio in the North," he said. "We should have a powerful station in the North." Mr. Bradette stated that he did not doubt that the local stations were serving a certain purpose, but that as radio is supposed to be nationalized now, the North has a right to hear our national programs over a national station.

"I know I'm getting the support of all citizens of the North in the fight to get us better reception of our national stations," he concluded.

Advantages of Old Civilization

Prof. Bouchard was very modest of the value of his own work and said that he might be considered by some to be a fossilized type. During his address, his listeners found quite the opposite to be true. "Two weeks below Quebec" there exists what most people consider a retarded civilization, he said, but it has preserved some of the things from the old civilization that are needed to-day in solving the problems that confront the people of Canada.

"There is a cry coming up from thousands of lips in this crisis that it not over yet," he said. "As long as we remain blind as we are to-day, we will never be out of this crisis." The cry of "back to the land!" that both provincial and federal governments have heeded is a step in the right direction, Prof. Bouchard thinks, but not the gospel of "dividend-minded" people of "It's useless to go back to the land because the land doesn't pay." This, he said, is not the way the problem should be considered but rather from the viewpoint of how the farmer can be content with the little money he does make. "The farmer is not looking to farming as a money-making proposition—there are other advantages of rural life. I invite you to oppose those who look to farming as an industrial proposition. How is it that farmers leave the farm in more prosperous times and they are going back to it now when it does not pay?"

"We Forgot Something Important"

The speaker reviewed the trend of the past 25 years and emphasized the ever-growing favour into which urban life has come. "We were all so much imbued with technical and scientific advancement that we forgot something very important in rural life," he ex-claimed. "All our social bodies revolve around the cities and we were proud of their development. Now our major population is in big cities and we suffer from it."

"The back to the land movement is an admission of our failure in the past. We have set standards of living and standards of life based on the standards set in the cities. It is the application of two pounds of cure where the ounce of precaution is still neglected," he stated.

"The boy or girl who is brought up in the face of wide horizons" has a distinct advantage these days, Prof. Bouchard believes. The country life with its greater independence from the changing conditions of an industrial world brings contentment and a full happy life, he gave as one of the reasons.

He predicted a new leisure for the working man when industrial hours are shortened. The change must come he believes, and when it does, a great appreciation of the good things the land can give will be a part of the labouring class. At the same time, more leisure for city workers would automatically create another desire on the part of those now living on farms to move to cities, where their working hours would not be so long and they would have more physical comforts.

"If you don't give those same advantages to the farmers, we will have another movement to the cities," he predicted. "When manufacturing starts again with ever increasing efficiency, more workers will be displaced."

He gave England as an example of a country whose industries are to-day turning out as much product as in 1924 or 1928, yet the unemployed are double in number. His idea is to make the farm a pleasant place in which to live; to extend electrical power to the farms, so country women may have all the household aids their city sisters have; to make the telephone more universal service, as an even greater need for communication exists in the country than in town.

penance," he said. "Urban people are trying to shape rural affairs." Prof. Prof. Bouchard said that when he spoke of "rural population," he meant not only the farmers themselves but all the professional men, business men and others—half of society. "I am not making an appeal for a class and I am not for the extension of our farming area but rather for the extension of our farming population. It does not matter so much if consumers are fed with food produced below cost. There are all these other things that do matter."

In his concluding remarks, the speaker summed up his address with the words, "The unemployed of to-morrow are to me more important than the unemployed of to-day."

Kiwanian Arch Gillies thanked the professor for his talk and said that he had given the club members something to think about. Father Theriault who accompanied the two visitors expressed his appreciation of the address by translating a French proverb, "Speaking is spending, but listening is acquiring." He gave as an example of what going "back to the land with a heart" might accomplish right here in Timmins, where he said there are between four and five hundred families who have nothing to do.

Kiwanian Geo. S. Drew introduced Mr. Bradette to the meeting with the words, "Mr. Bradette is as well known in the district as Father Theriault is in Timmins."

After the guests of honour had left for the station, arrangements were made to hold the Kiwanis bridge tournament as some of the members' homes this week.

The Kiwanis club is co-operating with the local Canadian Legion branch in the celebration for May 6th, King's Jubilee. The public affairs committee with Geo. S. Drew as chairman will be in charge of the Kiwanis share of the work.

Next week, W. W. Tanner, principal of Timmins High School, is to be the guest speaker. His subject will involve the cost of education to the taxpayer and the difference in cost between the present high school education and a more practical kind.

Juvenile Court Cases Remanded to Next Week

All the juvenile cases arising out of the recent police clean-up of small robberies in various parts of Timmins were remanded at Tuesday's juvenile court, owing to the absence of A. G. Carson of the local Children's Aid Society. They will be heard next Tuesday at four o'clock. Mr. Carson had been summoned to Cochrane on Tuesday as a witness in one of the cases before the court.

Pembroke Standard-Observer:—It is said that the budget, which may be presented to-day, will bear heavily upon those whose incomes are $10,000 and over, and it will strike everyone that this is a fairer way to raise a revenue than by a tax on sugar, although the present tax is so small that it should not be considered.

Help Yourself and Help the Town by Creating Work

An editorial note in The Amherstburg Echo last week is worthy of special notice and consideration. It reads as follows:—

"Wake up and listen to the birds in the trees as they come whistling with the Spring. Wake up and clear away all the signs of the old dead, cold winter and give spring the happy welcome. Wake up and get those old cellars cleaned out, these walls repainted and those store fronts decorated. Think about those repairs and the little plants for the garden and the house and the street. If you will start these works now you will be getting others in line. In another two weeks there should be a great demand for repair labour and those who are ready to do cleaning. Why not make your plans at once. This is the season to start a general repair campaign. If such a campaign were put across it would mean that there would be work for hundreds of men and women. Money would be circulated and merchandise would be in demand. These are the needs of the hour. Men and women want work everywhere. You have it in your house, your store, your office, your plant and in the back yard. Just set to work and plan to start some of that work at once."

Work to be Started Soon by Burbank Ramore Syndicate

The Burbank Ramore Syndicate, which owns a group of twelve claims in the Ramore district, has taken an option on a group of ten claims in McVittie township, adjoining a group at present under option to one of the large mining interests in Northern Ontario. Work on this group will commence as soon as the snow is off the ground. Work will also be continued on the Ramore claims following recommendations which have been made by its consulting engineer, as a result of work which was carried on last fall.

Ottawa Journal.—Sir Austen Chamberlain, hearing of Hitler's army decree, said, "Good, gracious!" It reminds the New York Times that when the news arrived that Ludendorff had broken through the British front and that the Channel ports were in danger, Lord Balfour said, "How annoying!"

Record Time Disposing of Police Court Cases

Only Nineteen Minutes Needed to Deal with Cases at Court on Tuesday. Two Serious Cases Remanded. Young Men Pleading Guilty to Thefts Bound over to Keep Peace.

An average of a minute a case was sufficient to dispose of 19 charges laid in Tuesday's police court here. It was a record day, for in all cases heard those accused pleaded guilty. Only two remands were asked. It was then merely a matter of finding out what the circumstances were, delivering a lecture where necessary, or imposing a fine.

Two young men were charged with stealing hockey pads and other equipment, the property of the McIntyre Hockey Club. In answer to Magistrate Atkinson's question as to whether or not they had ever been in trouble before, one replied that he had not and the other admitted to having been involved in a beer case some time ago.

"Will you behave yourselves if I give you another chance?"
"Yes, sir."
"You will never get into trouble again?"
"No, sir."
They were bound over to keep the peace for two years and were ordered to make restitution.

Broke Into Store

Two other boys, just out of their teens, pleaded guilty to breaking into and entering a neighbourhood store one evening. They had never been in police court before, they said.

"I don't know what's getting to be the matter with you boys," said his worship. "Perhaps I'm too lenient." He told them that the maximum penalty for a similar offence was 14 years in prison, and he warned them that if they ever appeared in court again, it would be much more serious. They signed bonds for two years to keep the peace and were released.

Five first offence drunks were treated in the usual manner—$10 and costs or 30 days.

Gus Landry pleaded guilty to permitting drunkenness in his place and was fined $50 and costs.

Two speeders paid $10 and costs and one young man charged with parking less than five feet from a fire hydrant was warned not to do it again.

A middle-aged man was charged with operating a motor car for hire without having a license to do so. He pleaded guilty. In response to the magistrate's questions he said that he had only taken out a license during the first year he was in town. He claimed to have an injured leg and stated that he made a bare living from what little business he did. He was advised to get a license and was fined five dollars and costs.

One fine of five dollars and costs was collected for indecent exposure.

The two remanded cases were one of having liquor not acquired on a permit and one of attempted rape.

Reporting $100,000 Kapuskasing Deal

Story that $100,000 Option has been Taken on Gold Property Near Fauquier.

The first announcement of reported gold finds in the Kapuskasing area was made in The Porcupine Advance some weeks ago when there appeared to be something in the nature of a small rush to the district. The Advance as usual with matters of interest to the North had the first news on the matter, though there was not much definite information available. It did seem the fact, however, that a number of prospectors were active in the Kapuskasing area and some good finds were reported. Later, one reported find was said to have proved less notable than at first supposed and this caused the usual tendency to reflect on the whole new field. The wise ones were inclined to say: "Nothing to it!" Further reports, however, show that there is something to it, though it is impossible to even rightly guess as to the importance of any work now being done in what may be done in what may be called the Kapuskasing area. The Northern Tribune, of Kapuskasing, has taken a sympathetic but careful interest in the possible new gold field from the start and the following from the last issue of the Kapuskasing newspaper is of more than passing interest:—

"We don't want to raise anybody's temperature unduly, but we hear a persistent rumour that is interesting enough to print, to the effect that a big mining company has paid $100,000 for an option on a farmer's land at Fauquier. There has been a trek to Fauquier for several weeks past; prospectors have nosed the fact that some good-looking ore was picked up near the Groundhog river last summer (some of which we have seen). After the spring break-up, it is likely that the vicinity of Kapuskasing will get a pretty thorough combing by prospectors looking for showings of gold. Local syndicates have already been formed to send men into the bush to beat this later rush. If there is any truth in the above yarn about the $100,000 option, it's a sure bet that no experienced mining company would get stung to that extent on any illusory showing. Their geologists steer them."

Bruce Matachewan Plans Resume Work on Property

Officials of the Bruce Matachewan Gold Syndicate have been laying plans for the resumption of work on the syndicate's properties in Cairo township in the Matachewan area. George L. Bruce, staker of the properties is to take in a crew just as soon as weather conditions permit. Trenching and surface exploration will be carried out on the showings which have been previously opened up.

J. L. Manley, syndicate trustee, states that the syndicate owes no money and is in good shape. The immediate programme of exploration calls for an expenditure of some $7,000 or $8,000.

Bruce Matachewan has an authorized capitalization of 10,000 shares, no par value, and has issued 5,246 shares. The property consists of seven claims, adjoining the Margo.

C. N. P. C. Review.—According to some authorities we are within measurable distance of the time when sights as well as sounds will be broadcast, and television equipment will be in the people's homes.

Ranking professionals and amateurs of the United States will compete April 4, in the second annual national tournament over Bobby Jones' course at Augusta, Ga. Jones who tied for thirteenth place in the first Augusta tournament over course on which many holes of world-famous courses are duplicated, has trained earnestly for the matches this year. Some of the 138 invited stars who will play, and an air view of the part of the course called a "golfer's paradise," are pictured above.
