Gay dual cords trim this chic bag of plain homespun

CORD AND CLOTH COMBINE TO MAKE THE UNIQUE BAG DESCRIBED

Bags for summertime are always in demand and when something smart and a bit out of the ordinary is to be found, and inexpensiveness is added to these virtues, there is an appeal which is difficult to resist. The bag which I am giving to-day has still another recommendation. It can be made at home. Cord trims the conservative textile.

Material and Trimming

The material is homespun with silk or rayon lining. The bag is big, and has a frame covered with the homespun. It is perfectly plain except for cord edging around top and sides. The edging is what gives the novelty style to the article. It consists of two rows on each side, of very heavy cotton cord in beautifully harmonious colours. The cord is invisibly sewn together, which is not at all difficult to do.

Sewing the Cord

Thread a long needle with neutral coloured cotton. Stitches will sink into the twists of the cord scarcely showing. Hold the two strands of the very heavy upholstery cord in the left hand. Run the needle up between the cords with a continual twist of the wrist so that the needle catches first one cord and then the other, as it slips under the strands of each alternately.

Trimming Bag With Cord

Sew the double cord to the edge of the finished bag. One length of the double cord extends around both sides of the bag with sufficient length left at the top to form one of the two handles. Start the cord at the lowest corner of one side-edge, and sew it to the bag up to the top. Here it crosses, and covers, the ends of the dual cords previously sewed across the top of the bag frame. Finish sewing cord to bag at top corner. Sew cord to other side as described. The loop remaining at top forms one of the two handles. Sew a strip of the dual cord around the back of the bag as described for the front. By sewing ends of the cord securely to bag the tips will fringe out and make a decorative finish.

Cord and Loop Fastenings

Sew a large button to centre-front of bag frame. Sew a strip of the dual cord to back of bag positioning it so that a loop is formed of sufficient size to go over the frame and fasten over the button. To the back sew the cord-ends letting the cord fringe out at tips as described above. The cord adds ornament to back of bag when it is not cut short but each end is sewed two or three inches down onto the back before tips are fringed out. Large square unfinished wooden buttons are the latest thing for the fastening buttons.

Further New Books At Timmins Library

Number of Interesting Volumes on Various Subjects. Also Some More Fiction Books

Books in the non-fiction class made available this week at the Timmins Public Library are:

- "Moscow Carrousel," by Eugene Lyons (As United Press correspondent in Moscow the author has learned his subject well. A wonderful book, illustrated with photographs).
- "Unrolling the Map," by Leonard Outwaite. (All the great adventures of exploration on land and sea from 2750 B.C. to 1935. An amazing book that correlates in a comparatively short space and in interesting fashion the steps that have gone to make the present map of the world.)
- "The Scot in England," by John Herries McCulloch. (A book that reflects the glory of Scotland and the incredible contribution she has made to England's Development)
- "The Romance of Motoring," by T. C. Bridges and H. Hessel Tiltman. (A history and a prediction; a summary of world-wide motoring and the changes it has wrought; exploration, crime, speed, war, manufacture and gasoline.)
- "Britners A," by Peter Esslemont. ("A minute a day with Burns" Called "a charmingly clear characterization of the national song writer, with insistence on those elements of thought and work that commend themselves to Broderhood men.")
- "An Anthology of World Poetry," by

HEAVY WAXED PAPER

Mark Van Doren. (This book contains representative collection of the best poetry of all the great countries and languages of the world, modern and ancient. A comprehensive work.)

- "The Sentimental Journey," by Hugh Kingsmill. (A life of Charles Dickens. Dickens, the author says, was the Charlie Chaplin of his day. Called "a genuine contribution to our knowledge of Dickens, the man and the critic.")
- "The Four Hundred Million," by Mary A. Nourse. (The history of China from its mythical beginnings down to to-day, condensed in one volume containing a wealth of new lights and shadows on the story of one of the earth's oldest nations.)
- "The Secret War," by F. C. Hanighart. (The author helped to write "Merchants of Death." His latest tells of the war for petroleum now being staged in many parts of the earth. As interesting as the former work.)
- "The Romance of Engineering," by A. D. Merriam. (Historical and human aspects of the sciences of engineering. The author is principal of a British technical school but avoids mathematics.)
- "The Glory that was Greece," and "The Grandeur that was Rome," by S. C. Stodart. (New editions of two works now regarded as standards that have grown more useful throughout the years.)

- Fiction now available includes:
- "One Light Burning," by R. C. Hutchison. (A trek through the Siberian wastes forms the foundation of an all round novel.)
  - "The Lions Starve in Naples," by Johann Fabricus. (A circus ship becomes stranded in Naples, with interesting results.)
  - "Good Old Yesterday," by Charles Hanson. (The story of an average family of the 90's and the early part of the present century in the South and New York City.)
  - "Thirsty Range," by E. B. Mann. (Western.)
  - "But for Her Garden," by Clarissa Fairchild Cushman. (The story of a southern girl who is transplanted from her native state to a walk-up Brooklyn flat.)
  - "The Daughter of Illusion," by Budd. (The Willoughbys, by Brown.)
  - "The Slash 44," by Nelson. (Western.)
  - "The Medico of Painted Springs," by Rubel. (Western.)

  - "Forgotten Winds," by Dare. (Love story.)
  - "Moonhills," by Bachell. (A young socialist inherits a large English estate.)
  - "Gun Smoke Cure," by Cody. (Western.)
  - "Two on Safari," by Chamberlain. (African novel.)

Appreciate Help in Making "Canada" Float a Success

The I.O.D.E. has asked The Advance to extend the very sincere thanks of the members of the Order to all who assisted them in making their float, "Canada," on May 6th, such a success. The students of the wood-working department of the Vocational School, under the capable direction of their instructor, Mr. Worthington, did the building of the float—a very creditable piece of work. Mr. Passmore, manager of the Star Transfer, very kindly loaned one of his large trucks for the occasion, as well as donating the services of a driver. The Holly Stores provided the decoration of maple leaves, and Mr. Charette the set of Canadian animals. Special mention should be made of the shields and the coat-of-arms which were done by Arthur Pritchard and Leonard Traver.

Albany Knickerbocker Press:—If Europe would only go in for baseball in a big way as we do, it would have something to worry about all summer and get its mind off war.

Onward—We were assured that after prohibition was abolished in the United States, there would be no more bootlegging; yet the other day the officers of the law seized the largest bootleg distillery ever captured in New England. This plant could turn out 75,000 gallons of alcohol a week, and it makes $1,000,000 worth of bootleg stills seized in New England since prohibition was repealed.
