Nome Dog Team Driver Gives Reason for Air Crash

Insufficient runway from which to take off after alighting to get directions from an Eskimo party, coupled with a cold motor, caused the crash in which Will Rogers and Wiley Post lost their lives in Alaska, in the opinion of Earl F. Hammond, bearded and athletic soughdrough from Nome, who is appearing in the Canadian National Exhibition grandstand spectacle this year.

Hammond appears in the grandstand show with his team of Canadian huskies. He has his Eskimo sled mounted on small, rubber-tired wheels, the front

Missionaries Return to Lonely Post

The Misses Francesca and Eva French and Mildred Cable, well-known British women missionaries, shown as they left London by train recently to return to their lonely and dangerous post at Tunhwang, the "City of Sands," in the Gobi desert. With the three women is seen "Topsy" a deaf and dumb Mongolian girl whom Miss Eva French bought for about $16 from brigands. The three women have been in England on a two-year leave.

pair equipped with a steering arrangement exactly the same as an automobile.

At the exhibition on Monday he gave a rehearsal demonstration of his seven dogs. As quickly as the eye could follow, the dogs turned right or left or stopped dead in their tracks at one shouted word. Or they whipped down the full length of the stage, bellies close to the ground, his long-lashed whip cracked over their heads. The dogs are as tame as kittens, love to be petted and are all veterans of long hauls, although five of them are less than two years old. The lead dog, a scarred-eared old-timer of 11 years, is as amiable as an old collie.

"I know the spot where the crash occurred," said Hammond, "I've crossed it often on hauls. The river is not as wide as this stage, but has very gently-sloping banks, except on one side where a mud bluff shoots up about 30 yards from the water.

"Rogers and Post landed, the reports said, to get their bearings. The reports also said that Rogers talked to the Eskimos while Post tinkered with the plane. That might mean the motor would chill a bit. Then, when they took off, they wouldn't have 200 yards in which to get a straightaway run. With a cold motor and a sharp take-off, disaster is much more possible. I think that must have happened."

Kirkland Lake Man had Hundred Dollar Birthday

Talk about celebrating your hundredth birthday! That is a long time to wait! And there's always a danger that you may miss the event! But a Kirkland Lake man last week did celebrate his hundred-dollar birthday. He had a party for a birthday and it was celebrated in great style. After the captains and the kings departed, and the guests also had gone, Steve apparently lay down in the road and shot off a revolver in the air as a grand finale to the birthday celebration. The police then broke up the party and Steve faced a charge of illegally being in possession of firearms. His lawyer put up the excuse that it was all on Steve's birthday, but Magistrate Atkinson seemed to think that if every man in Kirkland even once a year started to shoot up the street at 2 a.m., it would not be nice. Then, of course, there would be double danger in case a couple of fellows happened to have the same birthday and started shooting from opposite ends of the street. In any case Magistrate Atkinson gave the accused a birthday present of a fine of $100 and costs, which is why the birthday is referred to as a "hundred-dollar birthday."

Part Way Home Ride for Hunger Marchers

Majority Give up at Prescott and the Police Allow Them to Drift Away in Scores.

The "hunger marchers" who made their way to Ottawa with so much boasting and obstinacy, despite all warnings that there was nothing to be gained by their foolish parade, are not back at their homes. After Ottawa had made it clear that the city had no intention of keeping them or allowing them to stay and cage their supplies, and after both Premier Bennett and Premier Hepburn had made it clear that as they had made the trip despite all warning and advice, and refusing previous offers of transportation, they could make their way home any way they liked, the trekkers, started the sad homeward trip. They were accompanied by a squad of 20 police who did nothing except watch that the marchers committed no illegal acts. From the start of the homeward trek it was evident that the "marchers" were beginning to realize that their leaders had badly misled them and that all the adventure and romance had gone from the trip. First the trekkers began to desert singly and in couples. By the time Prescott was reached they refused to listen to the leaders left. In groups of 20 or less they boarded freight trains or trucks and thus hastened their way home. The police did not interfere. Eventually the march had become practically a "personal affair" so few were left. Attempt was made to reassemble the Toronto pilgrims on their return to that city and an interview was sought with Premier Hepburn, who was good-natured enough to meet their representatives again. A reference to this meeting will be found elsewhere in this issue.

Kirkland Girls View of Guide Camp at Kenogami

The following is the report in The Kirkland Lake Northern News last week of the recent Girl Guide camp at Kenogami which was attended by a large number of Timmins girls:—"The Girl Guides, who have been camping at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Martin at Kenogami, have returned home. Out of 80 girls who attended, there were 18 from Kirkland Lake, and they report having a marvellous time, "Martinogami," the name given the camp by the girls, was ideally situated and went far to making the vacation the pleasure it was. "Mrs. C. Gordon Smith of Kirkland Lake was camp commandant, and was assisted by Mrs. Harry Tomney of Cobalt, who is commissioner of the Guides for Northern Ontario. Miss Winnifred Nash of South Porcupine was nurse; Miss Jean Cranston, of Timmins, swimming instructress; Miss Iris Donaldson, South Porcupine, health patrol leader; Miss Valerie Freedman, of Noranda, nature study instructress; Mrs. Jack Neale of Kirkland Lake, cook; and Miss Kay Frew of Kirkland Lake, handicraft instructress. Miss Frew was also in charge of the canteen.

"Captain Stott of Noranda was a guest of the camp for last week.

Miss Cranston taught a series in life saving, and Miss Joyce Withrow, who is physical instructress of the Y.W.C.A. here, visited the camp for the final week-end and gave the girls an examination, and those passing the test received Guide badges, obtained from headquarters.

"A masquerade party staged one evening taxed the talent and ingenuity of the girls to the full and presented a gala spectacle. There were pirates, bears, brides, grooms, Mother Goose characters, and even quintuplets present, showing that a great deal of thought, time and energy had been spent on the enterprise.

"Those who attended camp at "Martinogami" this year are assuring others what an excellent time they had, and there will be more recruits when next summer comes around and time for camping is here."

Serious Crash on Road in Kirkland Lake Area

John R. Johnston, 7 Main street, Kirkland Lake, faces a charge of criminal negligence as a result of a crash on the Round Lake road on Saturday night last. When the case was called in court at Kirkland Lake last week the acting crown attorney told the court that Guy Holmes, the victim of the crash, was seriously injured that he would not be able to appear for at least a month. Asked if there was a chance of Mr. Holmes dying, he replied that unless complications set in his chances for recovery were good. In the meantime, Mr. Holmes is in Kirkland Lake hospital and is reported to be resting easier now. His injuries include a fractured pelvis and two fractures to the right leg. According to the officer who investigated the crash, Johnston was going south on the highway just below the rock cut near Rosegrove in the Round Lake section at about 7:45 o'clock Saturday night.

The Holmes car was stopped on the road. A dead battery was the reason for the stop on the road into Kirkland Lake. Mr. Holmes had sent his wife and children on into Kirkland Lake with Mr. Sipprell, a passing motorist, when the car stopped.

Johnston, the officer says, plowed into the stationary car and drove Holmes about 14 feet through the air and under the wrecking truck from the garage which had answered the call to fix the battery. The Johnston car continued 142 feet after the impact, careening into the ditch and plowing into a standing spruce tree, snapping off the sapling at the butt.

Johnston's car is almost a complete wreck. The Holmes machine can be repaired for from $75 to $100.

of this week, featuring

LaSalle Frocks

Here you will find exemplified, in sport, day-time and evening frocks, the Paris Fall dictates. You will note with interest the influence of Period and National styles. The Renaissance, particularly, is the most definite trend of the season, chiefly recognized in rich fabrics, beautiful sleeves and jewelled trimmings. In colours too, Renaissance greens and reds came through as predicted, and are unquestionably the key colours of the year, with rust and ginger strong runners-up for day-time.

Shragges extend a cordial invitation to view this showing (Friday and Saturday only), and feel sure that you will join in their enthusiasm for the new fall fashion. Another pleasing feature is the very moderate prices.
