Guard Yourself Against Any New Movements

This column has had several articles on the subject of why returned soldiers should have no truck or dealings with any of the new societies or movements of the present day. It has repeatedly warned all of the underhand work of the communist, and others of a like kind. It has heard the Legion members called "Fascists" and even your correspondent has been openly accused of being one himself. The steps of the Legion hall on Cedar street Timmins presented a fine site for chalk artists one evening, and every step was emblazoned with the words "Down with the Fascists." The tribute might well have been written by Legion members themselves. All clear and deep-thinking Legionnaires will agree that they would never submit to a dictatorship and so the communistic tribute on the Legion steps was washed off with a smile—and lots of water. This month's "Legionary" carries an editorial along similar lines and for its many fine points upon the subject of "isms" it is published herewith in full:

"Voices have been raised of late in fear of the development in Canada of a Fascist or Nazi movement. Ex-service men would do well to heed these voices. The social and economic situation of the country is at the moment well calculated to furnish rich ground for the fertilization and breeding of those "isms" which have in Europe brought about the destruction of individual liberty, the wreck of parliamentary institutions, the abolition of responsible government and the establishment of minority dictatorships. There are three outstanding examples—Russia, Italy and Germany. In each case history repeats itself. The first element to be exploited was the robust patriotism of the war veterans. Minor cliques found these organized groups accustomed to discipline and not too difficult to sway seeing that in no country of the world have ex-service men been without legitimate grievances since the war.

"Lenin and Trotsky used the demoralized armies of the Czar to install themselves in power, then the too glib veterans were eliminated from the picture. The Fascist who marched on Rome a decade ago were the soldiers of Diaz and Cadorna. Sickened of the chaos and corruption of the politically inept, they seized the reins of government and installed Mussolini. But these "liberators" are now in the discard. Adolf Hitler was swept into power by the "Stahelms"—the German war veterans association: he now treats the world to the spectacle of suppressing those to whom he owes most, with other campaigns of "liquidation" involving religion, freemasonry and Jews.

"In other words, after having cajoled the war veterans into acting as cats-paws to pull their chestnuts out of the fire, the leaders of these various "isms" ditched them, once their purpose had been served.

"These are lessons enough. However distressing conditions are in Canada, the path of remedy lies along strictly constitutional and orderly action, and emphatically not by the slavish imitation of peoples who had never enjoyed responsible government as we know it and to whom freedom of political thought was never more than a chimera.

"Canadian ex-servicemen would be fools to barter their individual liberty for the shackles of dictatorship and they would be traitors to the memory of Fallen Comrades if they succumbed to the honeyed words of the politically ambitious to the extent of countenancing the usurpation of power."

"Do You Remember When?" Perhaps you don't! Well it won't matter much if you do! There will be many interested in what the above rambles is all about. The answer will be forthcoming—when the Timmins branch entertain the South African veterans in the Legion hall on September 28th.

"Do you remember when Lady Smith was relieved?" etc., etc., will be the chief topics of the evening. There are only about 30 veterans of the South African war in this North Land and it was felt that the branches of the Legion throughout Northern Ontario should hold special evenings as a sort of "get-together. It has been said that those who served in France and Flanders were only apprentices of the Master-minds of the South African veterans. It is true that many an "Old Swede" put us youngsters through our paces and seemed to delight in such trivial things as having the "buckle under the right button."

My own experience with one of these "Master Minds" was in the riding school. "If you want to dismount, ask me!" Anyone knowing the ways of Army horses will see the folly of asking, when one was already on the ground. And anyone knowing the sarcasm of an old Imperial cavalryman will sympathize with those who came under their care. It can be said truthfully that the apprentices sure did a good job and that South Africa must have been a good training ground for the "Form Four!" artists. Never mind, we are forgiving them and are going to give them a royal good time even if "their mess tins are on the wrong side."

Opportunities Presented in Rural Communities

There should be more than passing interest at the present time, and under the present conditions, in the following editorial in the last issue of The St. Mary's Journal-Argus:—

"One lesson that the depression has taught many ruralites is that they do not need to go to the city to seek their fortune. There are opportunities right at home if they are observant enough to see them. As a matter of fact, in many lines of effort the leading men of the continent live in towns no larger than St. Marys.

"St. Marys stone was a drug on the market up to a few years ago when a far-seeing gentleman conceived the idea of turning it into cement. The result has been an industry whose annual turnover runs into millions of dollars and which has added tremendously to the prosperity of this town.

"In a nearby community a young man was nearly down and out physically. He could not walk and only got around in a wheeled chair. He appeared to be in an utterly helpless condition. This man conceived the idea of carrying on a business college. He did so and it succeeded. He added branches. Today he is also superintendent of a Sunday School, still wheeling around in his chair.

"A local young man felt the urge to go to the city some years ago. He earned big money as a mechanic. Living costs were high but he saved a little out of every pay. Hard times came. He saw ahead the prospect of being laid off work. He realized that his money would only last a year or so. What to do about it. He said, I will arise and go back to my home town. He came and heard of a chance to buy a snug home cheap. He put most of his money into it. It was a place to live. Work was scarce here, no jobs to be had. He found odd jobs around town and in his spare time fixed up his home, putting in a new heating system and constantly adding to its attractiveness. He managed somehow to keep the wolf from the door. And now at the end of four years he has a splendid home all paid for and a permanent job. He has also a sense of security. He wouldn't go back to the city.

"Another local lad saw opportunity in his own back yard ten years ago. He had made a hobby of trapping and he got the idea of starting a mink ranch. At the end of ten years he has one of the best mink ranches in Canada. Last year he and his brother-in-law, who also went into the mink-ranching business, sold one-third of the highest price minks on the Montreal Market. This Spring he completed a four years' course at Ontario Agricultural College.

"There are a number of wealthy men in this community. And as the names come to mind just now, we believe that practically every one of them started their active careers without means. Their chief assets were the habit of industry and an idea."

Blind Bee Keeper to be at Toronto Exhibition

No blind man could possibly make a success of the bee business! But that is just what Harold Webb of Allandale has done. During the progress of the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto this year, Mr. Webb will demonstrate how he does it. He will occupy a booth in the exhibit of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. In the large space occupied by this exhibit in the Electrical and Engineering Building, the various types of work engaged in by blind men and women in Canada will be demonstrated.

Recipes and Hints on Making Pickles

Choosing the Fruit or Vegetable for Pickling. Kettles to Use. Other Hints and Advice.

The preservation of food with salt or vinegar, either with or without the addition of spices or sugar is commonly known as pickling. The predominating flavour determines the kind of pickle, sour pickle, sweet pickle or spiced pickle. Green or slightly unripe fruits and vegetables are generally used. The vinegar used must be of sufficient strength to exert a preservative action, writes Lillian Heney of the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, and there must be enough of it to cover the material pickled. Pickles have little food value but they make a meal more palatable. They should never be given to children.

Only porcelain-lined or graniteware kettles should be used when cooking pickles. Acid will attack metal utensils, so they should not be used. A granite or wooden spoon should be used for stirring. A perforated agate ladle is a convenient utensil for lifting the pieces of pickle from the kettle. Finished pickles should be packed into sterilized jars or crocks.

There are three main classes of pickles: sweet fruit or vegetable pickles; sour pickles, which include mustard pickles; that large variety of pickle in which the ingredients are chopped finely.

There are many and varied recipes but the following are examples of the three classes of pickles and have been tested in the kitchen at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

Sweet Pickled Fruit
Peaches, pears, sweet apples, crab-apples, etc.
1 peck prepared fruit
1 quart vinegar
1 cup water
2 ounces stick cinnamon
1 ounce cloves
4 pounds sugar

Boil the sugar, vinegar and spices 20 minutes. Dip the peaches in boiling water and rub off the fur but do not peel the pears and apples. The crab-apples may be pickled with the skins on. Stick the fruit with whole cloves. Put into syrup and cook until soft, using a quarter, or half of the fruit at a time.

Unripe Cucumber Pickle (Gherkin)
Wipe four quarts of small unripe cucumbers. Put in a stone jar and add 1 cup of salt dissolved in two quarts of boiling water and let stand three days. Drain the cucumbers from the brine, bring the brine to boiling point, pour over cucumbers and again let stand three days, repeat. Drain, wipe the cucumbers and pour over 1 gallon of boiling water in which 1 tablespoon of alum has been dissolved. Cook the cucumbers ten minutes, a few at a time, in a quarter of the following mixture, heated to the boiling point, and boil ten minutes.

1 gallon vinegar
4 red peppers
2 tablespoons allspice
2 tablespoons cloves
2 sticks cinnamon
Strain remaining liquid over the pickles which have been put in a stone jar.

Chili Sauce
12 tomatoes
6 apples
1 bunch celery
2 red peppers
1 3-4 cups brown sugar
4 tablespoons mixed whole spices tied in a cheesecloth bag
2 onions
2 green peppers
3 cups vinegar
1 tablespoon salt
Chop and mix all together and boil an hour and a half. Remove the spice bag and bottle the pickles at once.

BE BEAUTIFUL

By ELSIE PIERCE
FAMOUS BEAUTY EXPERT

Every high school graduate will thrill to a gift of beauty. Their very own toilet articles, an atomizer, eau de cologne, a handsome mirror. ANNE SHIRLEY poses while using her favorite atomizer

HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES WILL THRILL TO A GIFT OF BEAUTY

Way down deep in every feminine heart is the desire for beauty, the response to beauty. I think it's born with us. Certainly if it's acquired, we must start very young, because I've seen tots of two get all puffed up when attired in a new dress. This desire for beauty manifests itself almost daily; sometimes quietly, sometimes overpoweringly. But it's there always.

And it amuses me when I hear mothers say, "Oh, my daughter of 14 or 16 is much too young to be thinking about beauty." Surely, you don't want to keep her from thinking about it. You may want her to be as naturally lovely as possible. You may not approve of her using much make-up. I'll grant all that. But unless she does think about her beauty, she won't even have the desire to keep herself looking well-groomed and lovely. Trouble is, that to most women beauty means a lot of artificial aids.

Simple Beauty Aids
The beauty market offers many simple beauty aids, wholesome beauty aids that will make their user more conscious of her own loveliness. That in itself is a worthwhile attitude to instill.

A set of brushes to keep her hair polished, her shoes shined, her clothes clean. Would you call her too young for those? Or some bath mits, or bath talcum powder, her own soap and wash cloths and towels with her initials. They sound like cleanliness aids but are first-rate beauty aids as well. And why not a little gressing table of her own if she hasn't one? A box of powder—her first, perhaps—and a very good one, worthy of that soft, girlish complexion.

At 14 or 16 she can have a colourless pomade to serve as a lipstick and keep the lips smooth and a wee bit shiny. A hand lotion and a set of emery boards, cuticle pusher or orange wood stick and a cuticle oil will help her get the beauty habit for her hands and nails. There are creams on the market that prevent nails from breaking, keep the cuticle smooth and even (without cutting) the hands soft. Why not a jar for her. Then there are little sachet bags to introduce her to the perfume world, tiny fringe or flower basket bags that are slipped into dresser drawers or hung over dress hangers. A charming remembrance and something subtly sweet to remember you by.

A jar of sunproof cream to keep her skin soft and protect it during the summer; a bottle of body rub to keep the body smooth as silk. Any harm in those for the high school graduate? We think not. Fact is, she'll thrill to them. Try and see.

Ten Thousand Cars a Month Calling to See Quintuplets

The young sirens of Callander are certainly "doing their stuff." At latest computations they were luring tourists off the beaten path at the rate of 10,000 cars a month. Every time the smiling Quintuplets are held up to the gaze of the curious throng beyond the wire fence which surrounds the Dionne hospital, it means that the fame of the youngsters spreads still further abroad and more and more tourists may be expected. It means money for the Provincial Treasury, too, if the estimate is correct that nearly $12,000 a month in gasoline taxes is being paid by visitors to the Quintuplets' home. Then 200,000 gallons of gasoline are being consumed in that period, or an estimate of 4,000,000 miles travelled. That means 10,000 cars with an average trip of 400 miles each. That is really not too high an average per trip because many of the license plates carry the names of California and Florida and Texas, and they all go up the North Bay highway for the express purpose of seeing the babies.
