Premier Talks Back to the Communist Hecklers

At Victoria, B.C., last week a group of red hecklers attempted to disturb a meeting at which Premier R. B. Bennett was the main speaker. The premier handled them in effective way. "I am not seeking votes by pandering to any lawless elements. You may boo and neigh till kingdom come, but so long as this government exists law and order will be maintained," he said. Then he added in very emphatic way, punctuating his words with blows from his hand on the table, that Section 98 would not be repealed. One despatch from Victoria put it this way:—"Section (bang) Ninety-eight (wham) stands!" (smash).

It took the heckling efforts of about 60 disturbers, gathered in the gallery among an audience of 2000 in the Victoria theatre, to awaken in the Prime Minister a fighting spirit not previously displayed in this campaign. In earlier speeches he was very much the elder statesman, expounding in almost fatherly fashion the issues of the campaign. Saturday night in staid Victoria it was made clear during the preliminary speeches of Hon. Grote Sterling, Dr. S. F. Tolmie and others that an organized crowd of hecklers—mainly communists, judging by the nature of the interruptions—was on hand. They booed every mention of Mr. Bennett's name and interrupted the speakers continuously.

The Prime Minister with his first words defied them. He hit out at them, browbeat them with thundering words, gave them no quarter. Interruptions continued, but Mr. Bennett made his speech and moreover had a Roland for every Oliver. The rest of the audience enjoyed the proceedings. They showed more enthusiasm than any previous audience of the western tour, doubtless partly because of resentment at the interruptions.

Make Wealth by Working
"How did you make your millions?" came one sally from the gallery.
"By working," shot back Mr. Bennett.
A shout of laughter came from the gallery.
"Yes, by working," continued Mr.

Bennett. "You should try it some time. If you worked your jaw a little less and the rest of you a little more you might have some money too." It was rough stuff but the rest of the audience enjoyed it.

Questions about Tim Buck brought a cheer from the audience when the Prime Minister challenged: "Who can say there is any denial of liberty in Canada when a paroled man is a candidate for parliament?"

Fired by his exchanges with the hecklers, Mr. Bennett went after the Liberal leader and policies with greater vigor than he has shown elsewhere. Speaking of Mr. King's tariff attitude toward the United States he declared: "You can't snivel about provocation and expect other countries to respect you."

Diamond Drilling at the Central Matachewan Co.

Central Matachewan Mining Corporation announces that the company has purchased a diamond drill and that a program of diamond drilling, instituted late last month, is now under way on the company's 14-claim group in Baden township. The first hole has now been completed and is stated to have intersected the vein at a depth of 143 feet where an 8.5-foot width was evidenced as compared to a two-foot width on surface. The core has not yet been assayed but is reported to be heavily mineralized. No report has been received on No. 2 hole but latest word from the property is to the effect that No. 3 drill hole has cut 23 feet four inches of vein matter. Of this section four feet eight inches is stated to have carried showings of visible gold.

On surface the main vein break has been opened up at intervals along a length of 3,000 feet. Channel samples taken over narrow widths have returned some high values. The Baden property is located north of the Baden Gold Mines and just west of the Thesaurus. The company also owns a group of 13 claims in Powell township situated a few miles north of the producing mines.

Fliers Honour Memory of Wiley Post

Marking the spot where he landed at the end of his round-the-world solo flight in 1931, Wiley Post's memory was honoured by the unveiling of a bronze plaque set in the centre of a nine-foot "star" at Floyd Bennett airport of Long Island, N. Y. Grover Whalen, representing Mayor La Guardia of New York City, delivered the eulogy in honour of the noted flier who met his death with Will Rogers in an aeroplane crash in Alaskan wilds. Many noted fliers were present to pay honour to the memory of their former comrade.

About Boarding Canaries and Hospital for Canaries

The following is a typical article from "Grab Samples," the happy column in The Northern News, and one of the happiest columns anywhere:—

"Two smartly-dressed ladies drove in a shining coupe down Yonge street in Toronto the other day. The spare tire on the back of the car, covered with glistening metal, also carried an advertisement, which read 'Canaries Boarded—Canady Hospital,' with a street address and telephone number.

"The observer was rather intrigued. What, he asked himself, would it cost a canary to board per week? Suppose one was a canary. Would he travel around from door to door, looking for the best and cheapest boarding house? How would one go about interviewing the landladies? Presumably he would examine the quarters offered, test the table and inquire about the bathing facilities, after learning the weekly charge. One wonders what sort of a person a canary landlady would be.

"Then there is this business of running a canary hospital. What happens to canaries that they land in hospital? Traffic accidents? Does old man Canary send his lady to hospital for blessed events? Does he personally go out on benders and wind up with black eyes and broken limbs? Have canaries appendicities? It is possible to imagine a canary with a sore throat but—gall stones?

"Asking these questions this observer was astonished to learn the ailments that these little yellow songsters are subject to. For example, dandruff. One owner said he sent his bird to a canary hospital and it came back looking like a bald-headed eagle—on a small scale. One parked his bird for the holidays at a boarding house and it never sang after. Must have heard something from the other inmates that discouraged it.

Perhaps it got the bird for its singing. "China is reputed to be the country of little industries but if that country has evolved any business that is more trifling than boarding canaries it has not yet been publicized. Anyhow, what has the canary business to do with mining?"

Noted Revivalist Admits Escaping from Prison

Rev. Ben F. Smith, internationally known as a revivalist, last week presented himself to the authorities at Jefferson City, Mo., informing them that he was an escaped prisoner, Frank Davis, formerly a miner at Neosho, Missouri, who escaped 15 years ago while serving a 30-year sentence for murder.

Smith and his Santa Cruz, Calif., wife sat in the governor's waiting room expecting papers returning him to prison when he was presented with a parole.

The governor's personal investigation of the case showed that Davis had slain in an attempt to protect his brother, Floyd, in 1919. He escaped after 13 months of imprisonment and became an evangelist.

The minister's fine record since then led Governor Park to say: "I found he led a clean, unblemished life. Nothing would be accomplished by returning him to prison." The 48-year-old minister was ordained in 1927. He has preached in cities in every part of the country.

Ontario Said to Plan Increase Gold Tax

Relief Expenditure Increased so that New Revenue is Necessary. May Ask $3,000,000 from Mines.

The following rather startling despatch comes from Toronto and is published in many of the daily papers this week:—

"In addition to a new income tax, the Ontario government immediately after the federal election will consider the imposition of a gold tax on the mining industry in the province. Determination of Premier Hepburn to balance the budget and at the same time charge all direct relief costs to current account would seem to make a new tax on gold mines in the province inevitable.

"Direct relief expenditures for the present fiscal year will reach the staggering sum of almost $25,000,000 or nearly double that for the fiscal year ending October 31, 1934.

"The steadily mounting costs of direct relief under Mr. Croll's administration led to a final decision to throw the whole onus of taking care of direct relief recipients upon the municipalities, with the province contributing a lump sum according to the number of families on direct relief and taking into consideration local conditions.

May Require $3,000,000
"To balance the budget it appears that about $3,000,000 will have to be contributed by the mining industry of Ontario in addition to its present assistance to the provincial treasury in corporation taxes and other charges.

"When last asked if the province would impose a gold tax on the same or similar lines to that which caused such annoyance to the Bennett government in the last budget, Premier Hepburn declined to say what the cabinet's stand would be in the matter.

"It is expected that the new income tax will net the provincial treasury about $10,000,000. Revenues for the fiscal year, according to present indications, should be up about $12,000,000 over last year. This will leave about $3,000,000 to be made up if the budget is to be balanced and direct relief charged to ordinary expenditure, where Premier Hepburn insists "it properly belongs."

"The only source of revenue which the government can find untapped at the present time, and which it believes can stand new tax burdens is the mining industry.

"The gold tax will be avoided if at all possible, since the Ontario government and particularly the Hon. Paul Leduc, minister of mines, and Hon. Peter Heenan, minister of northern development, is most anxious not to antagonize the industry at this time.

Mines Bought Bonds
"Premier Hepburn is also not forgetful of the assistance which the gold mines of Ontario were to the province in his so-called quarrel with the investment bankers when they refused to bid on his $15,000,000 bond issue three months ago.

"When he raised the interest rate and sold the bonds direct to the public, it was the mining interests of Ontario which took approximately $8,000,000 of the $20,000,000 asked from the government. Among the purchasers of millions of dollars of these bonds was Lake Shore Mines, McIntyre Porcupine, International Nickel Co., and several other leading mines.

"A new appeal will have to be made to the public for approximately $30,000,000 within the next two months. The Ontario government realizes that the same mines which helped the government in its last shadow boxing with the investment bankers may stand it in good stead again.

"It may therefore be deemed expedient to either forego the new mining tax and retain the favour of the mining industry even at the cost of a deficit."
